Another Day of Questions
Russia's 3,000,000
'Apres Vous,' Say France and Italy
Must We Go In?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company

This is another day, with all the news worth while coming from the other side of the Atlantic. England has sent her whole array of battleships, destroyers, submarines and flying machine carriers through the Mediterranean to the Dardanelles—partly to be ready, partly to impress the Turks with a great display of strength.

London hears reports that the Russians are getting together an army of 3,000,000. Those are Russians that have been fed, while others have gone hungry. They are young, and convinced that they are going to change the world—a dangerous conviction for their enemy, when it comes to fighting.

France and Italy make it clear that just at present they are not violently interested in another war. They have had about enough for a while. Greece has had a little more than enough. Her army of 250,000 has faded away to 20,000.

England alone, or part of England, with Lloyd George for its brain, announces that it will not "sacrifice the victories of our gallant sons in the Near East theatre." This is a patriotic way of saying, "Having got the oil wells of Mesopotamia and a firm hold on the Dardanelles out of the last war, England isn't going to give up." It is her praiseworthy habit, when the dust settles each time, to be found holding something new. And she hangs on.

Don't think that all this lacks interest for the United States. Already you see signs of our dear brothers in Europe, and some of our foolish sisters in America, eager to hand this latest war, or the bill for it, to poor old Uncle Sam.

Highly moral gentlemen, including Dr. Barton, chairman of the Near East Relief, secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, says it is our duty to take the responsibility for the fighting stirred up by the Greek King. We have great "moral interests in Turkey" and must "share responsibility."

A high English officer has "evolved a scheme" under which the nations of the world would be made responsible for Constantinople's neutrality, and—don't wince—General Leonard Wood of the United States would be put in charge. You can guess who would be asked to pay the bill.

Then come the Women's Board of Missions from Boston, telegraphing President Harding to prevent the occupation of Constantinople by the Turks.

If the big war comes, we shall be fortunate if we keep out of it. Habits are quickly formed, and with our conferences, our loans, our sentimentality and our profiteering patriots, we have formed the habit of considering ourselves responsible for the land-stealing schemes of other countries.

It is to be remembered that it is no mere question of a war between Turkey and England. England could hire men to settle that kind of war. But when England sends her warships, the whole Atlantic fleet, beneath the shadow of Gibraltar, through to Constantinople, England is thinking about RUSSIA, her three million men, and the ten millions more that she could collect. Merely shooting at that number of men would cost more than England would want to spend.

The bright spot in yesterday's news was a drop in the price of wheat. Wheat reflects the combined opinions of the world's international food gamblers. They

PASTOR'S WIFE LED RAID

Clergyman and Girl Arrested at Hotel Lenox, Woman Being Guide

"Hell has no fury like a scorned minister's wife."

Frederick Leeds, debonair ex-clergyman, gazed from the prisoner's dock at his wife, the Nemesis that pursued him from city to city and caused his arrest with Ellen Reed in a room in Hotel Lenox, and pondered over the misquotation.

Confronting them, her finely chiseled face registering grim determination, sat Mrs. Leeds in her role of wife spurned for a woman of scarlet past.

Bad Luck Symbol in Ring Worn by Mrs. Pease

On the middle finger of the right hand of Mrs. Maud Pease, whose mutilated body was found off Short Beach, Winthrop, was a ring set with twin opals. Superstitious friends of the murdered woman immediately connected the opals as symbols of bad luck with the tragic ending of the Beachmont bride.

PRESIDENT'S SISTER OUSTED FROM BUREAU

Washington, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Heber H. Votaw, sister of President Harding, is numbered among the first victims of the veterans' organizations in their fight against the employment of married women in the Veterans' Bureau. Announcement was made that Mrs. Votaw, who has been employed in the bureau for some time at an annual salary of $3,500, has been transferred to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, where she will look after the welfare of several thousand women and girls employed there. Her husband is superintendent of federal prisons.

OVERRIDES BONUS VETO

House Passes Bill by Overwhelming Majority, but the Senate Is Yet to Act

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Undeterred by President Harding's vigorous disapproval, expressed in his veto message, the House of Representatives this afternoon passed the soldiers' bonus bill over his veto.

The vote to override the President's veto was 258 for the bill, 54 against.

The action of the House, however, was regarded as constituting little more than an empty gesture, as the bill now goes to the Senate, where the enemies of the bonus are stronger and where the President's veto will be sustained, thus effectually killing the measure so far as the present session is concerned.

"This fight is only starting," Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion, told International News Service. "We are just taking off our coats. There is no thought of dropping it. We won against seemingly great odds in France and we are not discouraged now."

PLAN NEW BONUS BILL.

Other friends of the bonus in Congress asserted that new bonus legislation will be introduced in the short session of Congress starting in December. Whether the new legislation will duplicate the Fordney-McCumber bill, now doomed to death, has not been determined, but that

POLICE THINK SLAYER PLANNED TO SKIP AFTER LOVE SUIT

Shortly before Maude Pease was dragged in from the waters off Winthrop Beach, where she had been thrown after her throat was slashed with a razor, her husband, Arthur H. Pease, charged with the killing, was threatened with social and financial ruin.

He made desperate efforts to avert the double-edged disaster, but failed.

DOUBT GENUINESS OF HANOVER NOTES

The genuiness of notes brought forward in the testimony of the investigation of the affairs of the Hanover Trust Co., by the Grand Jury, in the hearing today was doubted. Their makers were called to the witness stand.

Edward E. Merrill, assistant agent of the 101st Liquidating Co. for the Hanover Trust Co., finished his testimony and Frederick W. Bowman, discount clerk of the trust company and William E. Kingston, a hand writing expert were also heard.

MUSICIAN SUES CLOSED SOCIETY

Louis Beserer of Boston, who claims that the Boston Societies of Singers, Inc., owes him $2.175 for services, has asked the Supreme Court to appoint receivers to take charge of the assets of the society. This company which was originally formed for theatrical enterprises, was dissolved May 20 of this year by the Legislature, but it was provided that creditors might bring suit against it at any time within three years.

HOUSE PASSES VETS' BONUS BILL OVER PRESIDENT'S VETO

there will be a new bonus bill there can be little doubt.

NO CHANCE IN LINEUP.

President Harding's message did not cause any material change in the lineup, it was disclosed today by Senatorial comment.

Speaking for the Republican pro-bonus forces, Senator James E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, said:

"While the President wrote a strong message, after all we are familiar with the argument stated and I do not think it resulted in any change of votes. The Republicans of the Senate admire the President and desire to follow him politically, but I do not regard the bonus veto as a proposition on which they should follow him after having made individual commitments to their constituents."

DETROIT AUTO FIRMS GET COAL AWARDS

Detroit, Sept. 20.—Detroit manufacturers found a ray of hope today in the news that the Interstate Commerce Commission had revised its priority orders, and lifted the ban on shipments of coal to industries not classed as essential. The effect of the commission's new order on the course of the Ford Motor Company, which closed its plants last Saturday, was awaited with much interest. It was recalled that Henry Ford, several weeks ago, found an operator in West Virginia who was willing to furnish all the fuel needed by the Ford Company, but that it was impossible to move it to Detroit.

WOULD ADOPT GIRL PARENTS DESERTED

Brockton, Sept. 20.—Six years ago a blue-eyed baby girl was placed in the care of the motherly Mrs. Carrie F. Hinds of No. 25 Falmouth street, Brockton. For a time the child's parents contributed to its support. Then they disappeared.

It is several years now since the parents of little Doris have communicated with Mrs. Hinds and she is asking the court to allow her to adopt the child. The parents are Clinton and Elizabeth Crouse.

All attempts to locate the child's parents have been fruitless.

STOLE BOSTON AUTO; GIVEN NINE YEARS

Brattleboro, Vt., Sept. 20.—Sentence of not more than ten years and not less than nine years at hard labor in the state prison at Windsor, Vermont, was imposed by Judge Harry B. Chase of Brattlebora, upon John Graham, 33 years old, of Providence, R. I., at the session of the County Court at Newfane.

Graham was one of the pair captured in Boston on the evening of September 12, with an automobile that had been stolen from Linn D. Taylor at Brattleboro on the evening previous.

The other respondent, Frank E. Stearns, of Johnson, Vt., 17 years old, received a suspended sentence of not more than five and not less than three years, and he was placed on probation.

PASSENGERS KICK AT DELOUSING

New York, Sept. 20.—Fifty-eight steerage passengers refused to budge from the President Adams yesterday when examining doctors ordered them taken to Hoffman's Island for delousing. A radio call for the police was flashed and the patrol boat Manhattan sped down the bay to persuade the passengers to let Uncle Sam chase away the cooties. The President Adams came in this morning from London, Cherbourg and Queenstown.

Borrows From Judge

MRS. EDITH HALLOR DILLON.

New York, Sept. 20.—Admission that she had borrowed $1,500 from Supreme Court Justice Louis Marcus to pay back rent on her Hollywood home was made in Supreme Court by Mrs. Edith Hallor Dillon, stage and screen star, testifying in habeas corpus proceedings by her former husband, L. Lawrence Weber, theatrical and motion picture producer, to obtain custody of L. Lawrence Weber, of whom Judge Marcus is legal guardian.

Walter J. Wakefield, former doorman at the Wyoming Apartments testified that men and women calling on Mr. Weber often left his apartment in a condition described as "wobbly."

Mrs. Dillon frankly admitted her child had been born September 10, 1918, four and a half months before her marriage to Weber, his father.

LARGE LIQUOR RAID STAGED IN BACK BAY

Nine gallons of whiskey in kegs.
Six gallons wine in kegs.
Seven gallons wine in jugs.
Three quarts wine in bottles.
Two gallons gin in bottles.
One quart gin in bottle.
One quart whiskey ditto.
One complete still.
Boxes of bottle caps.
Boxes of labels.
Bottle-cappers.
Funnels, etc., etc.

The raid was made by Special Officers McDonald and Coleman after watching the outside of the premises and the comings and goings there in. The official descent aroused neighborhood interest, with "business" of sighs from some observers as they beheld the fruits of the police visit.

ARREST GIRL AND PASTOR

tember 29. The unfrocked rector was released in bail of $500. The girl was unable to raise surety for like amount.

On the witness stand Mrs. Leeds told of how her husband had been ousted from his fashionable and exclusive parish for misconduct and how the bishops of his church had repudiated him for violation of the canons regarding the chastity of women.

"I have been after him for seven months, ever since he deserted me," said the discarded wife.

"He left me in New York a short while after he was unfrocked. He went with her. I obtained word that they were in New Haven. I went there. I missed them and heard that they had come to this city. I followed.

TRACED TO HOTEL.

"I learned they were at the Hotel Lenox. I told the police and went there with Sergeant Studley and Officer Condon. They were together."

Judge Parmenter looked from the spurned wife to tht woman, comparing, doubtless, the great difference between the finely gowned and charming appearing Mrs. Leeds with the disarranged and plain appearing Ellen Reed.

"I will continue this case until September 29 for further examination and investigation," the court ruled, placing bail for each at $500.

Leeds, who had managed to raise bail before arraigned in court, did not seem to be disposed to raise surety for his paramour. She is still in jail.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Leeds is preparing to return here to see that her interests are safeguarded.

"Divorce? Well, I cannot say just what I will do," came her answer to questions.

"As for my husband, well, I will have nothing to say now. What I do have to say will be told to the court.

"No, I do not bear him animosity. He is still my husband, after all."

READING OF MURDER CAUSES HIS ARREST

New York, Sept. 20.—His interest in reading Baltimore newspapers was the cause of the arrest of Walter Socolow, on a charge of complicity in the recent murder and robbery of William B. Norris. Detectives observed him daily buying newspapers and turning to stories of the murder.

McKENNA TO ADDRESS AMERICAN BANKERS

New York, Sept. 20.—Announcement was made today that Reginald McKenna, former Chancellor of the British Exchequer, in 1915 and 1916, would address the American Bankers' Association at the annual convention, which will be held in this city the week of October 2. Mr. McKenna is regarded as one of the leading financial authorities of the world and his views on foreign finance are especially sought by American bankers.

Lynn for Capitol of Bay State Is McPhetres' Idea

Mayor Harlan A. McPhetres of Lynn created a surprise at the three-day convention being held by the State Firemen's Relief Association at Lynn, when he told the visiting delegates that the city of Lynn was growing so fast and was making such rapid strides, that he would introduce a bill into the Legislature next year, asking permission to make Lynn the Capitol of Massachusetts instead of Boston.

The Mayor was making the address of welcome, when he injected the above statement into his remarks. At the conclusion of his address five Boston delegates jumped to their feet and announced that if they thought the Mayor was sincere about his remarks they would ask the delegates in session to record themselves against such a move.

ORDER ACCUSED MURDERER EXAMINED

The defense of Nicholas D. Macheras, twenty-nine, of No. 26 Kneeland street, charged with murder, will be that he was insane at the time he committed the murder, and is insane now.

On Feb. 13 Macheras, a dishwasher in the employ of Thomas D. Plakias, owner of a chain of restaurants in Greater Boston, stabbed Plakias with a long knife, after Plakias had criticised his technique as a dishwasher.

Today James J. Pasquale, attorney for Macheras, appeared before Judge Brown of the Norfolk County Superior Criminal Court and moved that Macheras be examined as to his sanity by the State Board of Mental Disease. The motion was bitterly opposed by District Attorney Katzman. After an argument lasting an hour, Judge Brown allowed Pasquale's motion. He ordered that Macheras be examined at once.

When Macheras was first arrested a charge of murder in the first degree was lodged against him. Since then Attorney Pasquale has been successful in having the charge changed to murder in the second degree.

HUSBAND HELD IN WIFE'S MURDER SUED BY REVERE WIDOW

NAMES HIM AS FATHER OF ILLEGAL CHILD

By HELEN M. LANE.

The other woman—there's always another woman—in the Pease murder case is Mrs. Katherine Brown of Beachmont.

While the Rev. Burbank of Winthrop was reading the marriage vows which two months ago joined in matrimony the gentle, flower-loving Maude Gillespie to Arthur H. Pease, Mrs. Brown was lying ill at the Lafayette Hospital in Chelsea, about to become a mother.

Pease was the father of this infant, Mrs. Brown charges. The child is now secluded in Dorchester.

"For two years and three months, Pease had been going with me," said Mrs. Brown. "All that time we had only one little quarrel, patched up in February. He seemed a wonderful man and promised to marry me.

"Like a bolt from the skies came the news of his marriage. I had no warning of it. I had never seen this new Mrs. Pease. I was completely stunned. Just once have I met her since, although I have seen her riding with Mr. Pease. It was terrible. I had no thought of another woman."

WIDOW IN HYSTERIA.

Mrs. Brown, a dark haired woman with two sons, nineteen and twenty-three, who live with her, grew hysterical. Her son came to her support.

"He is a man of no principle," she cried. "He left me and married that other woman for her money. He has been punished."

Mrs. Brown, who is under a doctor's care as a result of hysteria following Mr. Pease's marriage, has started a suit for $15,000, alleging breach of promise, "to punish," as she said, Mr. Pease.

Neighbors of Mr. Pease, a man of some means and the owner of several houses in Beachmont, say there were other women in his life.

Meanwhile in the Northern Mortuary lies the body of a talented and refined woman, tossed up by the tide into the very yard, almost into the arms of her beloved mother as it were, before the beautiful little cottage where morning after morning, night after night, she worked ceaselessly tending her bright rows of asters, nasturtiums, geraniums, hollyhocks and flaming red clusters of spike flowers.

TENDED GARDEN DAILY.

"Before she went to work in the morning, she was up with the sun tending those flowers. She gave them to little children passing by. Her pretty flowers and trained vines were the most cheerful things about there," said her next door neighbor.

"A woman like her couldn't commit suicide," said another.

In mute corroboration were the rubbers found on her feet when she was washed up. She always put them on before tramping in the damp loam of her garden.

Strangely enough, on the dresser in the room of Mr. and Mrs. Pease at No. 145 Crescent avenue, was the picture of the first Mrs. Pease to greet the second Mrs. Pease, as the first thing she laid eyes on when entering the room. There was no picture of the second wife anywhere in the house.

The victim was a woman of education. Up to the time of her second marriage she worked as an auditor for the John Hancock Insurance Company. In the small parlor of her husband's home two new packages of the works of Shakespeare were found in the first stages of being unwrapped. There were few other books in the house, which was very bare and dismal compared to the comfortable, cheerful cottage where she had lived with her mother and twenty-year-old daughter by her previous marriage, a graduate nurse at the Homeopathic Hospital.

Strangely enough, too, it was her own cousin, Mrs. Ethel Adams, who lived on the bluff above, who spied the body drifting near shore, while she was washing dishes at her kitchen window.

WORE UNLUCKY OPALS.

On her left hand was the new wedding ring. On the right hand, middle finger, another ring set with twin opals, the traditional symbols of bad luck.

On the shoes of the dead woman were rubbers, but she wore no outside skirt, only a thin silk petticoat. A white waist, a bit of underwear, and a deep old rose sweater which she wore while working in the garden the day before and in which she was last seen, completed the list of her garments, except for the brown oxfords and brown stockings.

Neighbors had seen her at sunset of the day before her tragic end, hurrying around happily helping her mother to pack to come to stay with her. She had for some weeks been tending her aged mother who had been ill of pneumonia, and was planning that her convalescence should take place in her new home.

In the late afternoon, she was seen riding about with her husband performing little errands, laughing happily.

"The two of them looked like true newlyweds," said Mrs. Gillis, a neighbor.

PEASE HELD FOR MURDER IN DEATH OF WIFE

On the one hand he faced a breach of promise action on the part of Mrs. Katherine Brown of Beachmont, who charged him with being father of her recently born baby.

On the other hand, he faced attachment of all his property, most of which he inherited when his first wife died some three years ago.

Panic-stricken, he appealed to Mrs. Brown to withdraw her suit. He promised there might be some method of settlement. It might work out, he hinted. But the widow refused to be persuaded.

Pease rushed to a bank in Lynn where he had his savings account, and drew out every cent he had on deposit—a matter of $1,100.

The following day he sold a real estate mortgage to his wife for $3,350. The money was in his pocket when he was arrested on the charge of murdering his wife. It is suspected he planned to flee.

After an all night questioning by the police, he was formally charged with murder in the first degree today, and is being held without bail. He was arraigned in the Chelsea Municipal Court before Justice George W. Stearns, and the case was continued a week.

Here is what Pease will have to explain:

The finding of a blood-stained razor in his home. At first he said he never shaved himself. Later he said the blood on the razor was the result of cutting himself while shaving. There is no such cut visible on his face. The police are sure the slash in Mrs. Pease's throat was made with a razor.

The finding on Pease's person at the time of his arrest of $3,425 in cash.

What was this money for and where did he get it? Pease has a vague story. He says it was to pay the aged caretaker of his home for ten years of service, at the rate of a dollar a day. Matthew Ennis, the caretaker, denies this.

CONFLICTING STATEMENTS.

Certain statements alleged to have been made by Pease to Ennis, which conflicted with later statements. Why did Pease tell Ennis after he had identified the body of his wife on the beach not to admit anybody to the house without a search warrant?

The facts in the case of Mrs. Katherine Brown of Beachmont. Did her $15,000 suit for breach of promise, about to be filed when Mrs. Pease was found, have anything to do with her killing? Mrs. Brown also alleges that Pease was the father of a child recently born to her.

PEASE'S STATEMENT.

Pease's complete statement, as made to Chief of Police Dyer after he had been arrested in Boston, follows:

"I last saw my wife alive Monday night, about ten o'clock, when we retired. When I awoke about six o'clock Tuesday morning, I noticed that my wife was not in bed, nor in the house. I was not particularly worried when I missed Maud upon arising. I thought perhaps she had gone to her mother's cottage at Beachmont. She frequently went there, but usually not so early.

"Her mother was excited when I saw her. She is a very old woman and has been ill. She said, 'Where is Maude, and how is she?' Owing to her condition I said nothing about Maude's disappearance. I started for my brother's house to see if she was there. Then I noticed the crowd on the beach. At first I thought nothing of it. But when I saw that the workmen repairing the breakwater had stopped work I decided to see what it was.

"I went over to where the crowd was and broke through. I saw the body. At first I could not positively identify the body and started to go back to my car. Then I decided on taking a second look. I figured after the second look it was Maude. I couldn't be sure at first because the face was battered. I saw only the knees and lower limbs at first. I didn't see the face, nor the cut on the throat."

HAD $3,425.

Questioned about the $3,425 found in his possession, he said he had promised "the old man," Ennis, a dollar a day for the work he had done for him as caretaker the past ten years.

Later, when Ennis was questioned, he said that Pease didn't owe him anything.

Pease had throughout displayed considerable knowledge of his legal rights.

Shortly after the body of Mrs. Pease had been pulled to shore, and he had viewed it, he returned to his home at Beachmont and gave certain instructions to his aged caretaker, Matthew Ennis. Among these instructions was this one:

"If anybody comes to the house, don't let them in without a search warrant."

Later, when Pease had been taken into custody at Boston, he turned to Chief of Police Dyer of Revere and said:

"I thought that Chief McLean of Winthrop, was coming.'

"Why should he?" demanded Dwyer.

"Well, it happened in Winthrop."

"What makes you think so?"

Here Pease suddenly decided to quit talking.

POLICE VISIT HOME.

The medical examiner, with Chief Dyer, Captain Tappan and other officers made a trip of inspection to the Pease residence late at night, going through the place from top to bottom. George McKinnon, a brother of the murdered woman, went with them, and when they asked for the keys to the house he sent a youthful relative over to his mother's house for them, telling the youngster:

"Tell mother to give you the keys, and say it's to clear away any possible evidence they might have against Arthur."

McKinnon told Captain Tappan that his sister was always going back and forth between her own home and that of her mother, because of the mother's illness.

"The first I knew of this was when Arthur called on me on the phone and asked me to come down right away," he said. "I came down as quickly as I could and together we looked at the body."

SEEKING WIFE.

"Arthur said he went to mother's house to find Maude when he got up today. When he got there mother asked him where Maude was and how she was feeling. Arthur replied: 'Why, I don't know. I thought she was over here.' Then he started over to my house to see if she was there. On his way he passed the beach where they were taking Maude's body out of the water. He couldn't identify it at first and he got me. Neither could I, at first, but we finally satisfied ourselves it was she."

Mrs. Brown is reported to have given birth to a daughter four months ago. The child is being cared for by friends in Dorchester. Mrs. Brown claims Pease is the father of the infant. She further avers that she was certain Pease would make her his wife and that while she was in a hospital he secretly married the woman whose body was tossed up by the sea yesterday.

She, too, was a widow, Mrs. Charles Gillespie, whose maiden name was Maude McKinnon of Winthrop Highlands, former auditor for the John Hancock Insurance Company. The police were today working on the theory that Pease's bride of eight weeks may have discovered his ardent courtship of Mrs. Brown, in some way got wind of the breach of promise suit and that there followed a quarrel which ended in her death by murder or suicide.

Although the officials investigating Mrs. Pease's death all leaned to the homicide theory today, they proceeded with extreme caution, eliminating elements which tended to support the suicide hypothesis.

One of the first clews that directed suspicion against Pease was furnished by the aged Ennis, who said that Pease told him his wife was very ill and probably would die, when Ennis asked where she was yesterday.

Mrs. Brown's husband died about six years ago. She has a son aged nineteen and another twenty-three years of age. She said she met Pease nearly two years and a half ago. He visited her home several times a week. They live within sight of each other. She visited his home and he took her on auto trips.

PROMISED TO WED.

"He promised to marry me," added Mrs. Brown in tears. I was positive he would. Imagine my surprise to learn that he married this other woman while I was ill. I saw them together in their automobile many times later. I met her once to speak to. She seemed to be a very nice woman.

"Since then I have had nothing to do with Mr. Pease. No, he never gave me presents or wrote love letters. But there was a mutual agreement to wed. The death of Mrs. Pease is a great shock to me. I can't believe it."

Mrs. Brown did not mention the child, of which she claims Pease is the father, but she did admit it to the Revere police. Her counsel, Attorney Leon J. Carro, of No. 535 Old South Building, Boston, said:

"It is true that I have started action on behalf of Mrs. Brown for breach of promise against Mr. Pease. The writ was filed August 21 and is returnable October 2, when Mrs. Brown's declaration will be filed. The ad damnum is $15,000. Beyond that I cannot discuss the matter."

SECRET MARRIAGE.

Pease married Mrs. Maude Gillespie, July 21. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Nelson S. Burbank, pastor of a Baptist Church in Revere. They had known each other for years, but Pease's courtship was as brief as it was sudden, according to those close to both families. Mrs. Pease did not take even her mother, Mrs. Annie Harris of No. 101 Upland road, Winthrop Highlands, into her confidence until after they had been married.

SOLD REALTY EQUITY OF SLAIN WIFE

Arthur H. Pease appeared alone at Lynn Institution for Savings August 23. He announced that he wished to withdraw his entire account, $1,100. His request was honored with little delay. The withdrawal form shows his personal signature to the transaction. Pease has never been in the Lynn bank since.

SuffolkRegistry of Deeds and Suffolk Probate Court have Pease on their records more than once. The Registry of Deeds records show that on August 24, 1922—the day after the withdrawal of savings in Lynn—Pease sold a real estate mortgage to his wife, Maude Pease, the present tragedy victim, for $3,350. Presumably he received cash for it.

Under Massachusetts law a husband cannot make direct conveyance of real estate to his wife. Pease conveyed this mortgage to George C. MacKinnon, who re-conveyed it to Mrs. Pease.

Pease's first wife, Mary E. Pease, died December 12, 1919, as shown by her will filed with Suffolk Probate Court. The couple lived then at No. 195 Pearl avenue, Revere. The will of the first Mrs. Pease, executed March 3, 1911—some nine years prior to her death—was allowed by the court.

Mrs. Pease left all her property, $372 personal and $7,850 real estate, to Pease, whom she named as executor. The real estate included a $4,300 equity in the Pearl avenue residence.

HELD A MORTGAGE.

Pease held a mortgage on the house and lot at Pearl avenue and Bennington street, Revere. In March, 1920, he sold the property to James Newbury of Revere for between $5,000 and $5,500. Newbury gave a mortgage back for $4,300, payable in five years.

Records show that Newbury has reduced the principal by payments amounting to $950.

Pease Highly Praised by Army Superiors

Supervisor H. Johnson of the First Corps Area, South Boston, under whose employ Arthur H. Pease served since October, 1907, was surprised at the charges brought against Pease. He said Pease was in his office last Thursday.

"I cannot understand all this" said Mr. Johnson. "Why, this man has made a great impression upon us all in this office and he is the last man I would associate with a crime like this. He is a splendid mechanic, steady, and has rendered admirable service in the maintenance department of the army. He had also served four years before coming to us in the Watertown arsenal."

Where Did Pease Get $3,425 He Had When Arrested?

Arthur H. Pease had $3,425 in cash in his possession when he was arrested and charged with the murder of his wife.

He failed to give a satisfactory explanation of where he got the money.

An inquiry into his financial transactions recently shows the following:

On August 23 he appeared at the Lynn Institution for Savings and drew out all his money—$1,100.

If so, why has he failed to state the facts?

Find Bloody Razor but No Marks on Prisoner

When the bloody razor, found in the home of Arthur H. Pease, who is held in connection with the murder of his wife, was shown to the prisoner, he explained that he had cut himself while shaving. Police officials commented, however, that there were no marks or scratches on his face.

55,263,263 LBS. OF FOOD ARE STORED HERE

Cold storage warehouses in Massachusetts held on September 1 about 3,300,000 pounds of food in excess of the quantity in storage the same date in 1921, according to a report made public today by Herman C. Lythgoe, director of the division of food and drugs in the State Department of Public Health.

The total amount of foodstuffs in cold storage, excluding fish, according to the report, was 55,263,263 pounds. In 1921 the quantity totaled 51,960,899 pounds, and in 1920, 68,445,582 pounds. The high figure for 1920 is understood to have been due to the enormous quantities of food that had been stored during the war years and which continued to flow into the storage warehouses for some time after.

The amount of beef in storage showed the greatest variation of any of the foodstuffs during the year as compared with the previous year. On September 1, according to the report, there were 2,277,161 pounds in storage, which was more than 2,000,000 pounds less than the quantity in storage on September 1, 1921.

Following is a statement of the foodstuffs in storage September 1, 1922, 1921 and 1920:

	1922	1921	1920

are keen men, well informed. If wheat drops it means they believe no really big war is coming.

American citizens should begin making up their minds what, if anything, they intend to do—will they send men to be shot in a war started by Greeks and Turks to settle the quarrels older than this nation? Will they mobilize their men and thousands of millions to uphold the theory that England should control one entrance to the Mediterranean by her possession of Gibraltar and the other entrance from the Black Sea by her control of Turkish claims in the East?

That is a very sensible idea for England, whose great need is freedom for English ships everywhere. It is for this country to make up its mind how much that means TO THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. Harding says this nation shall have no part in a new war. No ships and no men. Good, so far. What about money? And while President Harding is sincere, undoubtedly, he is not the strongest influence in the country.

AND, Mr. Wilson "kept us out of war"—for a while.

Here in America, where we don't start wars but sometimes pay for them, the atmosphere is clearer. Strikes seem to be dying out. Coal is moving to our cities from our mines and from British mines.

BOY, 16, BEATEN JAILED, BY POLICEMAN

James Fegan, sixteen, a Boston American office boy, living at No. 821 Winthrop avenue, Revere, was severely beaten by Patrolman James E. Cusick of the Lagrange street station, then dragged through the streets and held for two hours, during which he was subjected to abuse.

Bruised and discolored, Fegan today appears in the Municipal Court to answer to the charge of delinquency, preferred by his assailant.

James Fegan.

With the boy are expected a score or more eye-witnesses, who say they will describe the assault and the events immediately preceding.

High officials of the department are investigating the serious statements made by Fegan and others.

Young Fegan, a copy boy for the American, was going along Washington street on an errand to the Boston Herald office when he saw a policeman leading a prisoner across the street.

BRINGS THE BLOOD.

Fegan did not stop, but watched the scene as he kept on walking. The policeman stepped on the sidewalk in front of him and was joined by another officer. As they proceeded in front of young Fegan a third officer came up. The trio of policemen halted, and Officer 425 turned and ordered the crowd to "clear out."

Then he strode to where Fegan was walking, some three or four yards away.

"What are you following me for?" he demanded.

Without waiting for a reply, or giving the youth a chance to make one, the powerful officer, towering far above the youngster, drew back his arm and struck him full in the face with his fist.

Fegan staggered back. Officer 425 again drew back his arm and struck. Again Fegan staggered. Twice more the big policeman struck the lad in the face with his fist, say witnesses, until blood gushed from nose and lips.

Some civilian in the crowd advised Fegan to get the officer's number. The lad went after 425 to obtain the information, and was arrested. Down to the station went the three policemen, the lone drunk, and the luckless boy.

CHANGE THE CHARGE.

When Fegan asked him what he was being arrested for, Officer 425 growled:

"You oughta get murdered, you ——. If you don't keep still I'll smash your face in. You'll get it when we get to the station, anyway." And the officer shook a heavy fist under the lad's nose.

Arriving at the station, Fegan was perfunctorily questioned by the desk sergeant. A police officer—not 425—told the sergeant Fegan had "obstructed an officer in the performance of his duty." The slight, sixteen-year-old boy, he explained, had almost prevented three big patrolmen from arresting one drunk. The honor of the force must be upheld.

The sergeant glanced at Fegan, learned he was only sixteen, and changed the charge to the blanket one of delinquency. Then the lad was led downstairs, where the other officers and the helpless drunk had preceded him.

In the basement room young Fegan was given a further example of enlightened police methods, especially the way a helpless drunk is handled. Then Fegan was led upstairs into a side room, where various officers came to question him.

Lock Up Your Coal! Flapper Makes Good as a Crook

HOW TO BE A BURGLAR

JIGGERS, THE DICKS!

After having a try at safe-blowing I think I'll go back to work. Swiping an' income is jus' as much trouble as earning it. And think of the anxiety.

By THE FLAPPER
(CARYL FRINK)

"Sh—" warned Dynamite Joe, in a terrible whisper. "Lift the puppies, can'tcha. Y'soun' like a rhino-saurus."

"I'm being as quiet as I can," I said. "I can't help it if the cinders crunch."

"Migosh," groaned Joe. "You settin' yourself up as a first-class crook an' you don't know 'nough to wipe the cinders off'n your dawgs. Where'd you grajuate from?

"Correspondence School," I told him. "I'll never forget how proud I was on commencement day. When the mailman handed me my diploma with a few suitable words, I burst into tears and gave the college yell:

"Down with Harvard,
Out with Yale,
Three loud cheers for
The U. S. Mail."

"Our class pin was a two-cent stamp. Ah, what good times we usta have at the class-reunions in the main post-office—"

"Fergit it," snapped Joe, "an' tend to your larceny. Looka here. This is the way you walk in a cindery alley, get me?"

We stopped in the shadow of a high back fence while Joe showed me how to brush the cinders off each foot before putting it down. After that I was as quiet as a caterpillar with rubber heels walking over a carpet.

"Aren't we almost there?" I asked. "I'm not so nutty about prowling around in so much darkness."

"Sh—," shushed Dynamite. "Here we are now. An' not so much conva'sation, either, see? This is a tick'lish job. An' I don't mind telling you I' got my doubts about you. I asked the agency for an experienced helper an' looka what I got. Labor conditions is gettin' awful—"

By this time Joe had the window jimmied open and was boosting me in.

THEY TACKLE SAFE.

"Better'n a dress suit," grinned Joe, putting the jimmy back in its velvet lined case. "Gives me entree into some of the best houses, huh?"

In another minute Joe had located the safe and we had crouched down beside it.

I handed Joe the nitroglycerine.

"An' here's something else I brought along," I whispered, handing him a nail file.

"Whas' that for?" Dynamite demanded.

"To file your hands with," I said. "Jimmy Valentine always did."

"Jimmie Valentine pulled a lotta non-union stuff," snorted Dynamite. "I'm no cake eatin' safe-cracker, sister. When I put my 'nitials on a safe they know somp'in happened to it. Say—whassa matter with the soup? It shoulda blowed by this time."

"I don't know," I said. "You never can tell what they put in the stuff these days."

"I oughta get it open with my tools, anyhow," said Dynamite. "This is awful. I never fell down on a job yet."

"Have you tried the drill?" I asked, helpfully.

"I've tried everything," wailed Joe.

FLAP MAKES GOOD.

"You," sniffed Dynamite. "why—say, I was cuttin' windows when you were cuttin' your teeth. I was wearin' a mask when you was wearin' a bib. I was outa jail even before you was outa school. I was—well for the luva—well, I'll be—well mi-gosh, how'dja do it?"

The safe had sprung open and the loot lay before us in great heaps.

"With a hair-pin," I said.

"Well I'll be—," breathed Dynamite, admiringly.

Outside we paused to divide the swig before we parted.

I got nine lumps of hard coal—and Joe got ten.

"That's the bunk," declared Gravina. "I challenge him to an even fairly good job within that time. I will do a good job faster than he will. I don't know whether I could do a poor job faster because I never have done a poor job. I'll guarantee, though, to finish the job to the king's taste in 20 minutes."

"That's too bad. Let's see the pet fox."

"Sorry, but the fox was killed Saturday night by a neighbor's bulldog."

"That's too bad. How's your wife?"

"Sorry, but I can't tell you. She left me last week."

"That's too bad. What are you going to do?"

"I filed suit for divorce, but she beat me by a day."

GOV. TAYLOR ENTERS FIDDLERS' CONTEST

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 20.—Alf A. Taylor, seventy-seven-year-old Governor of Tennessee, is entered as a contestant in the annual old fiddlers' contest of the State here tonight. Governor Taylor has been renowned for his ability as a fiddler since his youth and the talent was shared by his brother, the late Senator Robert L. Taylor.

POTTERS TO STRIKE OVER WAGE DISPUTE

East Liverpool, O., Sept. 20.—President John T. Wood of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters announced that he would issue instructions to 7,000 general ware pottery workers in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Indiana, New York and New Jersey to quit work on the night of Sept. 30. This action was taken as a result of a referendum vote, tabulated today, by which the men rejected the proposal to review the existing wage contract which expires October 1.

WAR SCARE SENDS UP BRITISH FOOD PRICES

London, Sept. 20 (By International News Service).—The Near East war scare is causing a rise in food prices. British flour today increased 4 shillings on the sack, while American flour went up 7 cents. It is reported that speculators are actively buying up provisions of all kinds. The insurance market quotes a rate of 20 per cent. to cover the risk of Premier Lloyd George's resignation. This is an increase of 5 per cent. in forty-eight hours.

PHILIPPINES SWEPT BY GREAT TYPHOON

Manila, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press).—Serious damage is believed to have resulted from a typhoon which has swept over the Philippines for the last thirty-six hours. All telegraph wires are down in the north and it probably will be several days before details are received.

The typhoon traveled westward, and according to the Weather Bureau, has subsided.

GET RELIEF FUNDS FOR MINERS' KIN

Jackson, Cal., Sept. 20.—While a mine rescue crew continued to bring to the surface bodies of victims of the Argonaut mine disaster, the West today had turned its attention to relieving the plight of families and dependents of the forty-seven men who died after being imprisoned by fire far down in the gold workings. Compensation checks and funds realized from boxing bouts and theatre benefit performances already are beginning to pour in. Mrs. Lola Potter, Amador County coroner, prepared to impanel twelve jurors today to investigate the disaster.

The Woman Who Works

Shoes are responsible for many cases of physical depression, in the opinion of Dr. Wilmer Krusen, head of the Department of Public Health of Philadelphia. Dr. Krusen made the following official statement:

"The subject of sensible shoes is now attracting the attention of the women's clubs. The Health Department sees in this move a still greater object, that of reducing one of the most troublesome complaints, sore feet. Persons who are required to stand a greater part of the day should give due consideration to the type of shoes used.

"The subject is of great importance to the business woman who is required to stand during the greater part of the working period. The tired feeling often complained of at the end of the day's work may be attributed to ill-fitting shoes.

"Proper shoes are essential for the proper function of the foot. The designation of any particular shape, quality or make of shoe would be folly, as every foot requires its individual shoe. All that can be recommended is that such shoes should be selected which give the greater amount of comfort and ease."

Cantilever Shoes have been endorsed by numberless authorities. Thousands of women have discovered that Cantilever Shoes make walking easier and standing less tiresome. They are noted for comfort and good looks. There is a wonderful new idea embodied in these shoes. Let us explain it to you.

MAIL DOOR-SLOT OR RECEPTACLE REQUIRED

Office First Assistant Postmaster General,
Washington, August 25, 1922.

On account of the delays caused to carriers at dwelling houses where no door-slot or mail receptacle is provided and the fact that a large majority of dwellings are thus equipped already, it seems timely, within a reasonable period, to require all who are to receive mail by street carriers at their dwellings to provide such accommodations, the expense of the same being small. Postmasters are therefore thus instructed. The length of notice should not exceed four months, although there may be exceptional cases where postmasters should use reasonable discretion or ask for instructions.

It is not the department's desire, of course, that any shall be deprived of delivery by this requirement, but rather it is earnestly hoped that all will see the reasonableness of it and its advantage to themselves as well as to the carriers. But if it finally becomes necessary mail delivery will be discontinued where no door-slots (preferably) or mail receptacles, are provided.

JOHN H. BARTLETT, First Assistant.

SEEK RECTOR MURDER CLEW IN OLD "MYSTERY MANSION"

MORE LOVE LETTERS FOUND

Pistol May Have Bearing on Killing of Minister and Choir Leader

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 20.—An abandoned farmhouse near the orchard where the bodies of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills were found last Saturday morning came into the spotlight of today's investigation of the double murder.

It was believed possible that this house, about a mile and a quarter from New Brunswick, N. J., may have been the meeting place of the wealthy clergyman and his choir leader, and that they may have been followed there by the murderer or murderers on last Thursday evening.

Whether the authorities believe that the shooting took place inside or outside the house, which is only about seventy-five feet from where the bodies were left under a tree in such a composed position that they appeared to have been carried there, could not be learned. The authorities would not discuss the house, but it was learned that they had examined it during the day.

FIND A PISTOL.

The investigators have found a pistol which they handled with great care. They admitted that the weapon was "pertinent to the case," but refused to say whether they believed that it was the one with which the shooting was done. According to the authorities, the cartridge shells found with the bodies were of .32 calibre, short, for an automatic pistol.

The only person so far mentioned in the case who admits owning a pistol is "Willie" Stevens, brother of the clergyman's widow, and he has said that his pistol was of .38 calibre, and that he always kept it under lock and key in the Hall home, where he lives.

HUSBAND AND DAUGHTER LEAVING FUNERAL.

MRS. MILLS.

The arrest which Middlesex County authorities predicted was not made. Several witnesses were examined and county detectives and troopers appeared to be working hard, but they were unable to announce any definite results. Prosecutor Stricker of Middlesex refused to give information about the case, alleging that publicity would interfere with the investigation.

Mrs. Hall and others of her family—the wealthy and socially prominent Stevens family—are also doing all they can to avoid publicity. There has been some talk of political or social influences becoming involved in the case, but it is generally believed that a thorough investigation will be made.

Detectives who examined the farmhouse, known in the vicinity as "the old Phillips place," apparently tried to do so without attracting attention, for they were seen entering a back window.

The farmhouse has been known as "the house of mystery" for some time. It is a weather-beaten two-story frame house, almost 100 years old, standing in the midst of high trees and hillocks that entirely conceal it from the sight of passers on Easton avenue.

The grounds all around it are run down as is the house itself, with a cellar door off its hinges and piles of rubbish around the backyard. But the mysterious feature of the house is that despite its outward appearance of abandonment, a glance through the windows at the interior shows that it is completely furnished, and appears to be without that accumulation of dust that characterizes a house that is never occupied.

A handsome mahogany staircase with carved banisters leads up to the second floor, and the furniture in the drawing room is of fine old mahogany. There is a gas lamp on the table, and a "red runner" tablecloth, and other fixtures that seem to make the lower floor quite liveable. Nothing at all can be seen inside the bedrooms on the upper floor, however, for the shades are drawn close to the bottom of the windows.

According to Detective David, the motorman of a one-man trolley car who has told of carrying Mrs. Mills from New Brunswick to Easton avenue last Thursday night, says that she boarded the car about 9:30 o'clock, instead of 8 o'clock, as previously reported. She got off the car at the end of the line, not far from the Phillips place, about 9:45. As it was between 7 and 7:30 when she left her home in New Brunswick, the authorities are now confronted with the problem of what places in New Brunswick she visited between then and 9:30.

They have now traced her as far as 7:45 o'clock on Thursday evening. At that hour, it has been learned, she telephoned to Dr. Hall at his home and made an engagement to meet him at the church within a few minutes.

"How about later?" Mrs. Mills is said to have asked the clergyman.

"I think I can arrange it," is reported to have been his answer.

Whether they actually met in the church has not been learned.

In the clergyman's study, however, they found six letters written by Mrs. Mills to Dr. Hall, which have been of great help to the investigation. These letters have not been made public. According to Prosecutor Beekman of Somerset County, they are more important than the notes found near the bodies, and have given the authorities most of the clues they have had to work upon.

ARREST BOSTON MAN POSING AS DRY AGENT

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Bartholomew Shea, a Boston man, and Joseph Stewart of Washington, D. C., were placed under arrest here on charges of impersonating an officer, when Dry Agent Edward Harrigan discovered that the two men were carrying government badges.

With the metal insignia of the Federal government pinned on their coats the men entered a soft drink parlor and represented themselves as dry agents. They attempted, the police claim, to obtain a sum of money from the owner, informing him that they were special men employed by the government on the trail of bootleggers.

They even offered to allow the soft drink proprietor to sell liquor if he would give them enough money, according to the officials.

Stating that he must get in touch with his partner before making any deal, the proprietor used a phone to call the police. The arrests followed.

COLE SCORES HARDING AS BETRAYER

President Harding was flayed as the President "who goes back on his word" by Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, former Commander of the Legion, in a statement scoring the President for his veto of the bonus bill.

The general took especial exceptions to the statement of the President that service men returned from war in better shape mentally and physically.

"I deny the statement that the service men returned in better shape physically or mentally," said General Cole. "On the contrary, every service man is far below, both mentally and physically, his condition before he entered the war. High medical authority confirms this statement.

"The President has gone back on his word to the service man and has gone over to the selfish interests who have demanded that he veto this bill. I rely on the patriotic Senators to pass the bill over his veto.

Down the curve toward exhaustion

At its highest each morning when you're fresh—then your energy begins to fall. How far do you travel down each day toward exhaustion?

Till about noon you go slowly. Then comes a sharp drop. You're tiring quickly. And by night—

Have you enough energy left to enjoy your hours of recreation? Or are you too tired for anything but sleep?

Most people don't realize that they start out every day with a certain limited amount of energy—and no more. Every unnecessary waste means just so much less for the things that really count. It makes no difference what your job is—your work and your play both suffer.

Standing and walking on hard heels—this is one of the most useless ways of using up your energy.

Most people think they've stopped this waste

8 out of 10 people wear rubber heels instead of leather to relieve this drain on their energy. How much of it do they really stop?

It depends on the heel.

The famous rubber compound which goes into every O'Sullivan Heel was perfected by a group of the world's best rubber experts. Within a few years it has changed the habits of millions of people—enabled them to save energy, instead of pounding it away daily on hard pavements.

Look at your heels!

Are yours O'Sullivan's?

If they're not, ask your repairman for O'Sullivan's next time—and notice the difference!

O'Sullivan's usually cost you no more than ordinary rubber heels. But see how much freer you are from tiredness and strain at the end of each day!

EUROPE FACING RUIN AS TURKS PLAN BIG WAR

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO
Written Expressly for and Cabled to Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service.)

Paris, Sept. 20.—The battles fought in August and September, 1922, in Asia Minor, will be reckoned the most important of the World War after the battle of the Marne that signified the end of the German hegemony in the world.

From those battles will probably spring an aggressive awakening of Islam and the ruin of European power in Asia.

MERCILESS WAR LOOMS

England, France and Italy will soon be involved in a merciless war with Islam. The Entente begins to pay the price of not having measured capacities in 1919 before carving up the world. It has sinned not only against justice, but against prudence, which is the greatest error in dealing with affairs of the world.

This for the Crescent is the first ray of joy and hope and triumph that has shone on it for more than a century. For the first time since the French Revolution a Mussulman army has defeated a great European power without the aid of Christians.

There is not a single Mussulman from Morocco to India who will not feel certain that Mustapha Kemal Pasha defeated not only Greece but England and the entente.

EUROPE UNPREPARED.

The victory could not have happened at a happier moment, for Islam Europe is divided and impoverished, almost totally disarmed and governed by ignorant rhetoricians, intriguing lawyers and profiteers. Her military potency and goods are wiped out and her prestige destroyed. Never was she weaker and less able to ward off an offensive from Asia.

The Asiatic catastrophe—for it is a catastrophe for Europe—is a consequence of the madness of the entente in forgetting in the ardor of war intoxication and victory that Constantinople is the holy Mussulman city.

This madness is now likely to cost them the frightfulness of a new war in which thousands of Europeans will be sacrificed on the altar of greed.

Turks Fired Smyrna, Declare Americans

Constantinople, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press).—The American torpedo boat destroyer Simpson has arrived here, bringing more American eyewitnesses of the Smyrna fire. All agree that the flames originated in the Armenian quarter of the city and assert that the evidence strongly indicates that the Turks wilfully started the fire.

The Americans declare the Kemalists would not have dreamed of destroying the whole city, for the possession of which they had spent years of toil, unnumbered lives and much money, but it was palpable, they aver, that the Turks were bent upon wreaking vengeance on the Armenians for their alleged participation in the events of 1919 which led to the death of many Turks.

American sailors on patrol duty declare they saw Turkish soldiers setting houses afire and applying torches to heaps of rubbish in the streets.

Officers aboard the American destroyer express the opinion that the 300,000 hysterical men, women and children who rushed to the quay when the fire was at its height would have been burned alive if the wind had not abated.

More British Ships Off to Dardanelles

Malta, Sept. 20.—Various units of the British Atlantic fleet are on their way to join the naval forces in the Dardanelles, but the authorities here are reticent as to details.

It is learned, however, that a second destroyer flotilla, composed of the most modern vessels, has been ordered from England, and that the light cruisers Caledon and Carysfort are due here shortly on their way to Constantinople.

Other ships of the Atlantic fleet ordered to reinforce the Mediterranean fleet are the light cruisers Curacoa and Ceres, and the aircraft carrier Argus.

Allied Chiefs Meet in Paris Today

Paris, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press).—Representatives of France, Great Britain and Italy today put their heads together to seek an adjustment of the near eastern tangle.

SEN. WALSH TO PRESIDE OVER CONVENTION

Senator David I. Walsh will preside over the Democratic State Convention in Springfield Tuesday, according to plans today.

Chairman Arthur Lyman of the Democratic State Committee announced the Senator has accepted an invitation to be present and, he said, "the Senator is, of course, the most logical person to preside."

Mr. Lyman said that the names of former Congressman Richard Olney, former Mayor Andrew J. Peters and former Congressman Frederick J. Stimson, who is also a former minister to Brazil, are among the many recommended for the chairmanship of the important resolutions committee of the convention.

The Democratic chiefs will meet in Boston late this week to complete the convention plans.

Announcement is made that the resolutions committee of the Republican State Convention will hold its public meeting Friday afternoon to hear platform suggestions from the public.

13-YEAR-OLD BOY HELD FOR MURDER

Mae Lochlear

Holland Davis sullenly sits in the jail steadfastly repelling the advances of police and apparently giving no though to the death of the girl, Mae Lockiear.

All the south is talking of the case and conjecturing whether the bullet that imbedded in the child's heart was fired with malice or whether it was an accident.

Holland Davis

The boy had taken his fathers rifle. They were playing in the yard. The shot was heard. Two horrified mothers looked out to see the boy standing defiants and the girlprone on the earth in a growing pool of blood.

UKRANIAN COSTUME COLORFUL AS SUNSET

New York, Sept. 20.—From all indications traffic at this point will not be cleared up for several days.

Olga Kopachuck

And all because little Olga Kopachuck, the Joan of Arc of Ukrania, strolled along the avenue, dressed in her national costume. Those boots, that hat, that gorgeous sash, so said the ladies as they looked at the little Olga whose costume was as colorful as a sunset salad with rainbow dressing.

FREE STATERS TAKE PRISONERS IN DRIVE

Belfast, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press).—The National troops continue their vigorous campaign against the Republicans.

In the course of a clean-up of County Sligo, in which the Nationals converged from six points upon a village where the Republicans had their headquarters, fifty prisoners were taken, together with all their weapons. The Nationals used a field gun in this operation.

A drive on the Republican positions in Kinlough and Tulaghan, Northern County Leitrim, also yielded a large number of prisoners. The government troops were proceeding southward to join the western National army under General McKeon. Two Nationalists were wounded.

Two soldiers and two Republicans were shot dead in an ambush at Dundrum, County Tipperary. A motor driver conveying women and children home was shot dead near Tralee, County Kerry, and the car seized.

MASONS PLAN CRUSADE FOR WORLD PEACE

Cleveland, O., Sept. 20.—A crusade for world peace in co-operation with Masonic jurisdictions of the United States and twenty other supreme councils of Europe, South America and Africa was outlined here by Sovereign Grand Commander Leon M. Abbott in his allocution delivered at the opening of the supreme council of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction United States of America, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite.

Emphasis was placed by Commander Abbott on the danger of anarchy and bolshevism and the value of the spiritual life.

Mr. Abbott reported 19,572 masons took the thirty-second degree in the Northern Masonic jurisdiction during the past year, increasing the total to 218,291.

A letter from President Harding expressing regret at his inability to be present last night to receive his thirty-third degree was read.

A gift of $25,000 to several hundred former service men who are Masons was announced by Commander Abbott and approved by the supreme council yesterday. In 1917 a fund of $100,000 was placed at the disposal of the commander for the purpose of giving "relief and comfort to the soldiers of the World War," Mr. Abbott stated, and as all the fund had not been used the donation was made from it.

Plans for the building of a clubhouse at the Government Tuberculosis Hospital at Fort Bayard, N. M. for Masonic patients to cost $25,000 were announced by Mr. Abbott.

TARIFF BILL GOES TO HARDING TOMORROW

Washington, Sept. 20.—Exactly one year, eight months and thirteen days after its preparation was begun by the House Ways and Means Committee on January 6, 1921, the Fordney-McCumber Protective Tariff Bill passed through the stages of legislative enactment.

It now goes to the White House, where only President Harding's seal of approval is needed to make it a full-fledged law and a live political issue.

The WORLD War on Booze

WILL Europe be dry by 1950? Twenty-five years ago most of us laughed at the mere thought of America going dry. Now, our prohibitionists, Frazier Hunt tells us, plan to make all Europe dry within the next thirty years. But the "Wet" interests of Europe, with a great international organization at Paris—completely organized, equipped and financed, have already launched a determined offensive against the world-wide dry movement. The war is being fought on three continents. The United States furnishes all the inspiration and most of the money! Read about it in Hearst's International for October.

The Inside Story of HENRY FORD'S JEW-MANIA
By Norman Hapgood
Robbing the U. S. Censor

Can you trust your doctor? What do you know of the 45,000 drugs now on the market? Here is the truth for you by an expert whose scientific researches have helped make the Rockefeller Institute of New York the leading investigating organization of the world.

The Vitamin Craze

By PAUL H. DE KRUIF, Ph. D.

NO advertising campaign of drug-mongers has been so gaudy as the one now being conducted by the vendors of vitamins. The virtues of vitamins clamor at us from the display ads in reputable daily newspapers—bellow from subway advertising cards—shriek from sky signs on Broadway.

* * * * *

What are the origins of this astounding hoax? To explain will be to tell you a bit of the history. See "Doctors and Drug-Mongers," Dr. de Kruif's series now running in Hearst's International.

An Editorial by Norman Hapgood

Editor of Hearst's International

THE novel by H. G. Wells of which the first instalment appears next month, is an ideal story for this publication. Diverting, even amusing, easy to understand and to talk about, it nevertheless stretches the conscience and the understanding. No problem is too large for "Men Like Gods." Yet Wells has written nothing of simpler narrative interest.

To Mr. Herrick's novel beginning this month a similar test will apply. A young girl loses her father, who is her only friend. She and her mother are totally out of sympathy. Over many rough places she works out her own life. Is that an interesting story, or is it not? Is the answer of the utmost importance to every parent, or is it not?

If Dr. De Kruif's article on Vitamins, in this issue, and the series on drink abroad, and the Marconi article, in addition to being essential to our present-day knowledge were not also interesting to the untrained mind, they would miss the purpose of this monthly. If Wells's novel, in addition to being entertaining, lacked its importance of content, it would play a minor rôle. In the sport of writing policies in single sentence, we have constructed nothing more exact than "have fun while you read, but know something when you get through."

Her Own Life

By ROBERT HERRICK

A Novel of a Modern Woman's Search for Freedom Begins in October—Now on Newsstands

LILLA was conscious of the man's face bending over hers. Now was the time to escape, she thought, but she did not want to escape. She looked him directly in the eye as he took her in his arms. "I did it," she said to herself with a strange, honesty, as he kissed her lips and face passionately. "I wanted him to do it. It may be wrong, but I want him to kiss me." . . . Lambert seemed immensely relieved by this frank sharing of responsibility.

"You are an awful good sort, Lilla!" he said, trying to put his arm about her and draw her to him.

She drew back stubbornly, looking at him as if she were reading his man's soul like a wide-open book. Then without further words she rose and threaded her way through the underbrush.

Germany Turns to Religion

EVEN the political upheaval in Germany, says Gerhart Hauptmann in Hearst's International for October, is not greater than the religious revolution. Today in the land of Luther there is worship at the shrine of Buddha. There is even a mystic interpretation of Bacchus and Walt Whitman.

RAWLINSON IS CALLED IN DOTTIE CLARK CASE

MOTHER IN NEW CHARGE

Film Hero's Relations With Former Brookline Girl Stirs Hollywood

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 20.—Herbert Rawlinson, dashing screen hero, whose portrayal of love scenes on the silver screen has made him a popular matinee idol, has been subpoenaed to appear at the office of the district attorney to show cause why a charge of attacking 17-year-old Dorothy Clark of Brookline should not be lodged against him.

The decision to issue a citation ordering him to appear before the county officials was reached following a lengthy conference between Deputy District Attorney J. W. Joos, Mrs. Evelyn Clark, mother of the young girl, and Dorothy Clark, who was formerly a head liner at the New York Hippodrome.

CAUSES FURORE.

Coming, as it did, upon the heels of a $200,000 damage suit filed by the mother, as guardian of the petite young dancer, against Rawlinson for a previous alleged attack upon the girl when she was but fifteen years of age, this latest development caused a furore to sweep through the film circles of Hollywood that has not been equalled since the Arbuckle and the Taylor cases were before the public.

The exact charge which Rawlinson will be called on tomorrow to explain is that on the evening of August 3, following a lengthy telephone conversation between himself and the young girl, who still admits being deeply in love with him, he drove up to her home at No. 1646 Harvard Boulevard and after inducing her to enter his automobile committed an act of a felonious nature.

The alleged crime is said to have been witnessed by the mother, who becoming anxious over the length of the girl's absence, went in search of her and discovered the two in the actor's machine.

RELATIONS RESUMED.

Several months ago both mother and daughter arrived in Los Angeles. Despite the fact that Rawlinson had been publicly charged with ruining the girl, and despite the fact that he was a defendant in a $200,000 damage suit, friendly relations were resumed between the three and Rawlinson gave the daughter money.

"The allegations made to the district attorney by Mrs. Clark and her daughter are merely a part of an unwarranted scheme against me," declared Rawlinson today when apprised of the charges made against him.

"On the evening of August 3, I was with Dorothy for a short time. I came to the house at her solicitation. I had been informed by her that they were in desperate straits, in fact that they did not even have enough to eat.

"Notwithstanding the cruel manner in which I had been castigated by them in the public press, I could not fail to heed this appeal for aid.

"I drove over to their home and gave Dorothy the $20 she had requested. That was all there was to the entire transaction.

"It was evidently an attempt on the part of the two adventuresses to trap me into a compromising position. They have hounded me ever since they first arrived in this city."

TRACES STOLEN WIRELESS SET BY RADIO

Cleveland, Sept. 20.—One night in August the home of Daniel F. Murphy was burglarized and a large part of the equipment of his radio station stolen. Among the loot was a high-powered sending set.

Several days later radio operators in Cleveland heard a new station with powerful apparatus sending out messages. The new station had no call number, was not licensed and could not be located.

Believing it was operated by the thief who robbed him, Murphy, an electrician, set out to find it. He installed a receiving set on an automobile and night after night toured the city, tuning the set to the pitch of the unknown operator. When the messages grew faint, he changed the direction of the car.

Finally repeated circling of a particular block failed to show any point where the messages could be heard more plainly than another.

Eric Kutz, 18, lived in this block. He had become the pride of the neighborhood with his new wireless set. Persons came to his home every day to see the set. As fellow radio fans, Murphy and his friends also visited the house. There they recognized the stolen apparatus.

Yesterday Kutz was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the Mansfield reformatory after he had been indicted for burglary, larceny and receiving stolen property.

BROKER DENIES SMUGGLING ALCOHOL

Osgood C. Gilbert, a State street ship broker, who is fighting extradition to New York to face an indictment charming him, with fifteen others, with conspiracy to smuggle alcohol into New York denied all part in the alleged smuggling at his hearing before U. S. Commissioner Hayes.

The steamship Korona cleared from New York more than a year ago with a cargo of alcohol for Greece. It is contended that the cargo was transferred to barges the City of Malden and City of Boston and returned to New York.

Gilbert declared that in the course of his business as a ship broker, he acted as agent in securing the services of both barges for the Globe Line of New York. He had both towed to Newport, R. I. His interest in the case ended there the defendant said. He understood the barges were to be used in the oyster shell trade.

Asserts Bobbed Hair And Rouge Do Not Hinder Success

Success can go hand in hand with powder, rouge and bobbed hair!

So Mrs. Emma Fall Schofield of Malden, who has just been sworn in as a member of the Industrial Accident Board of the Commonwealth, avers.

"Let the flapper rouge and powder, bob her hair, and enjoy herself, provided these activities do not restrict her," she says. "The world is before her today, with a thousand professions and lines of work to choose from. Only she must make up her mind that nothing is won without sincere, hard labor."

'L' TO GET 100 NEW STREET CARS SOON

Shipment of one hundred new surface cars for the Boston Elevated Street Railway will be commenced during this month, it was announced by the trustees of that railroad today in their monthly report for August.

A decrease of $57,877.85 was noted in the revenue for the month of August of this year compared with that of last year. The total revenue was $2,500,753.10 for August, 1922.

Although 1,434,909 more revenue passengers were carried than during the same month last year, the cost of service exceeds receipts by $217,128.55, due to large expenditures for reconstruction of tracks and other maintenance work.

The number of five-cent fare passengers carried during the month of August alone was 6,001,000, or 22.32 per cent. of the total revenue passengers.

STUDENT, WHO COMMITTED SUICIDE, INTENDED TO KILL GIRL

CHOIR SINGER TELLS OF DISPLAY OF REVOLVER

Norwalk, Ct., Sept. 20.—Miss Lillian Erickson, pretty high school girl and choir singer of eighteen, whose wooer, John H. Green, committed suicide on Sunday night because his suit had been repulsed, said today that Green had intended to kill her also.

The Van Rensselaer Polytechnic student, she said, had taken her for a ride on his motorcycle on Saturday and led her to a secluded patch of woods and suggested that she permit him to shoot her.

SUSPECTED JEST.

Thinking he was jesting, she at first lightheartedly acquiesced, but when she saw a wild look of determination come into his face she dissuaded him from his purpose.

At the time, she said, he had produced a revolver and discharged it into the ground as though to learn whether it was working properly. She went on to say:

"Johnny importuned me again on Sunday to run away with him and marry but I refused, telling him I had my musical career and he had his college course to finish. I admonished him to hurry off to college, as his father was after him."

LOVES HIM NOW.

"I don't believe I knew how much I loved Johnny until now. And it was my refusal of him that caused him to kill himself. I shall never forgive myself, although he must have been temporarily out of his head to have dreamed of killing me too."

Myopia Hunt Club Planning Busy Fall Season With Hounds, Says Betty Alden

MRS. FREDDIE AYER, JR.

One of the most skillful and popular horsewomen along the North Shore is Mrs. Freddie Ayer, Jr., who was formerly Miss Hilda Rice.

By BETTY ALDEN

THEY'RE off!

The hunting season has begun, and hounds and hunters are out bright and early these cold, brisk mornings.

An especially large field turned out at the Myopia Hunt Club on Monday for the run of the hounds, and I understand that the master, James W. Appleton, is arranging a card for November.

Probably the most popular season along the North Shore is the Fall, because the colony there is essentially a sport-loving one, and Fall, of course, is the season when King Sport reigns supreme. The Myopia Club at Hamilton is really the centre of activities on the Shore, and following the hunts, many of the members give breakfasts there during the Autumn months.

IT is interesting to note that the womenfolk along the Shore are, nearly all of them, as enthusiastic riders as their fathers, or brothers, or husbands.

Undoubtedly one of the best horsewomen in that region is Mrs. Freddie Ayer, Jr., who was formerly Hilda Rice, daughter of the Charles G. Rices. Whenever Freddie Ayer or his wife enter the show ring they seem bound to carry off the largest number of blue ribbons, just as they did in the recent Myopia Show.

Then there's Mrs. Neil Rice, sister-in-law of Mrs. Ayer, who was formerly Emma Mandell, and all the members of that family are devoted to the sport. Others who spend a good portion of their time in the saddle include Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., Theodora Ayer, Eleanora Seare and Olivia Ames.

THE Robert Gould Shaws, 2nd, are planning to make a long season of it at "Gull Rock," their Newport place, and were among those entertaining over the past week-end.

Though the key has been turned in the lock of many . Newport showplace for the last time this season, many members of the so-called Summer colony are remaining on until late in Fall. Tennis and golf are occupying the attention of many, and there is keen anticipation over the match which the T. Suffern Tailers are planning to hold on their private links, in which Jesse Guilford and Francis Ouimet are to swing their drivers and brassies.

MRS. JOHN PHILLIPS REYNOLDS of Marlboro street is stopping for a few days at the Hotel Lorraine. Also in New York on a brief visit from Boston is Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2nd, who is registered at the Plaza.

Mr. Shaw, her husband, is recovering from a rather bad fall which he had while playing on the Myopia polo team in the recent matches held in Dedham.

THERE'S a good deal of interest in the news that the Freddie Princes have returned once more to their beloved "Princemere" after two months spent in Southern France at Pau.

The Princes are known here as well as abread for their splendid horses, and now I understand that they have completed a new riding school on their Pau estate, where they plan to spend the Winter.

Their son and daughter-in-law, the Freddie Princes, Jr., were recently kept very busy with the wedding of Mrs. Prince's sister, little Alice Harding, to Robert Thompson Pell. Their wedding was solemnized at St. John's Church in Beverly Farms, the wedding breakfast being held at the Dexter Cottage, Pride's Crossing, which the Freddie Princes, Jr., have been occupying this Summer.

THE former Isadora Bliss of Boston and her husband, Amory S. Carhart, after closing their country place at Tuxedo Park, will occupy an apartment in New York at No. 250 Park avenue, which they have leased for the season.

The Carhart-Bliss nuptials added one more to the long list of New York-Boston alliances, the groom, a Harvard '20 man, meeting his bride during his college course here.

THE Alden A. Thorndikes are stopping for a few days in New York at the Hotel Belmont, coming on there from Northeast Harbor, Me. I believe that they are en route to Hot Springs, Va., where they always spend a portion of the Fall at The Homestead.

Miss Elizabeth Thorndike, the youthful daughter of the house, is to be presented to society this Winter.

MRS. CHARLES E. PERKINS, JR., of Commonwealth avenue, is registered at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York for a few days' sojourn.

COL. MOORE ASSUMES DUTY AS INSPECTOR

Colonel George D. Moore of New York City, formerly instructor of the National Guard of that State, took charge of the office of inspector of the First Corps Area today. The colonel is a graduate of West Point in the class of 1890 and has served in the office of inspector-general at Washington and overseas, and, during the World War, was inspector of the Second Corps.

HUSBAND GETS DIVORCE AND CASH

In the midst of cross-examination, attorneys representing both plaintiff and defendant in the case of Raymond G. Hill, the Lynn B. & M. switchman who sued his wife Ella for divorce, naming Charles Bourque of Lynn, announced to the judge in Salem divorce court that they were ready to settle the case out of court.

Judge Quinn acquiesced, and Hill, under the settlement, is given a divorce, as his wife agreed to withdraw her defence, while Bourque, who is named as the home-breaker by the plaintiff, agreed to make a cash settlement with Hill.

Hill based his case on a raid made by him, Eben W. Sears, Jr., and Special Officer William J. Crowley at the Hill residence at No. 362 Chatham street, where they declared they found Mrs. Hill attired in a night dress in a bed room, and Bourque in another room hastily donning his clothes.

"But didn't you feel like carving up Bourque?" asked Attorney James W. Sullivan, appearing for wife, Ella.

"No, it wasn't my nature to feel that way towards anybody," replied Hill.

So the romance grew at Hill's expense, he declared. It was not until many auto rides of Bourque with his wife that his suspicions were aroused. Then the plans for the raid were made.

Hill declared that of his $26 salary, he gave his wife $23 every week. He added that he did not throw Bourque out of his house when he suspected him, because he read in the "People's Lawyer," a legal column conducted by a Boston newspaper, that a wife had a legal right to have a man come to the house if she so desired.

Pigeon Beats Mail From West by Ten Hours

Brockton, Sept. 20.—Uncle Sam's postal service has been beaten to a frazzle for speed. And all through a little homing pigeon.

Harry T. Baldwin of No. 60 Wheeler avenue landed a big order for his concern which manufactures goods in this city. He couldn't wait for the United States mail and decided to send a pet homing pigeon on its way.

The bird arrived here from Cleveland, Ohio, in approximately thirty-six hours, just ten hours sooner than Uncle Sam's mail men could have made the delivery.

PEACE TERMS ARE SOUGHT BY DE VALERA

London, Sept. 20.—Eamon De Valera is in Dublin trying to negotiate with the Provisional Government, says a dispatch to the Daily Express from Belfast. He is in hiding, but is seeking through an intermediary to arrange a conference with the Free State chiefs to discuss peace terms.

The correspondent adds that the rebels are badly short of food and ammunition and dread the approach of Winter.

"LILY LOVE" DREAM OF JUANITA MILLER ENDS IN DIVORCE

ROMANCE OF SIERRAS BLASTED

Daughter of Mountain Poet Says Hubby Was Too Lazy to Even Mend Fences

By Universal Service.

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 20.—The "lily love" dream of Juanita Miller, daughter of the late Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, has ended. Her love had run its prismatic gamut and wound up in deep-hued tones of divorce "blue."

Juanita's "lily love," John Miller-Read, was too much of a lily and not enough of love.

The technical grounds were desertion. John left the Hights, the Miller home in the Oakland foothills after seven months with Juanita. With the granting of the divorce it was learned for the first time that Juanita is forty-two years old.

Her "lily love," which she now terms "lotus love," is two years her senior.

Mrs. Abbie Miller, Juanita's mother, told the court that John was cruel and once knocked her daughter down.

Juanita said John would not mend the fences around their home and wouldn't do "lots of other things."

"He floated on the surface of our love," she explained, "just as the lotus flower floats on the surface of the water, too tired to work, too tired to pay the bills."

Thus ended Juanita's second adventure into the matrimonial world. She confided to Judge James G. Quinn that she was "never going to be attracted to or lured by handsome men again."

The marriage of Juanita and John took place secretly at Redmond City, December 20, 1920. John left the Hights on July 6, 1921, never to return.

Juanita's marriage was to John Reavis, mining engineer. This romance was short lived and Juanita obtained a divorce in March, 1918.

The divorce action followed the refusal of Reavis to attend the formal wedding ceremony after Juanita had announced a trial marriage.

CHILE AND BOLIVIA NEARING A BREAK

Geneva, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press)—Relations between Bolivia and Chile are such that grave difficulties threaten, unless the mediation of a friendly power or the arbitration of the League of Nations can be secured. This declaration is made in a letter received by the secretary of the League Assembly, from Alfredo Gutierrez, Bolivian delegate to the Assembly.

JUANITA MILLER

Daughter of late naturalist and poet Joaquin Miller, who divorced her "lily love" husband, John Reeves, as sad end to romance of the Sierras.

JEWELL MAKES CONSPIRACY CHARGE

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Counter charges of a conspiracy of railway executives to destroy rail unions were injected into the proceedings by the defense when the hearing of the government's rail strike injunction was continued today before Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The charge of a conspiracy to destroy the railroad unions made in an affidavit by B. M. Jewell, head of the shop crafts organizations, was offered to charges by Attorney-General Daugherty that the rail strike was a conspiracy against interstate commerce.

In his affidavit Mr. Jewell laid the blame for the strike at the door of the Association of Railway Executives. Twenty five rail heads linked together in the operation of ninety-nine Class 1 roads with a trackage of 211,280 miles, or 82 per cent. of the country's entire mileage, were specifically mentioned as responsible for conditions leading to the strike.

WAR SOUVENIR BLAST WOUNDS 2 VETERANS

New York, Sept. 20.—A one-pound shell exploded in a room occupied by two elevator operators in the six-story apartment house at No. 127 West Fifty-eighth street, injuring both men.

The hearing of Joseph McLean, twenty-two years old, a shell shocked war aviator, was destroyed as the shell exploded within a dozen feet of him. Harold J. Ackermann, twenty-two, his roommate, also a World War veteran, was struck with a piece of the shell. The projectile, which is believed to have been a war souvenir, was on a shelf in the room. Ackermann was removing it when the shelf tipped and the shell exploded.

Ill Suicide by Gas

Parents and Court Aid Marriage of 17-Year-Old Pair

North Adams, Sept. 20.—Cupid's darts, shot straight and true to the heart of two youthful lovers apparently determined to embark on the good ship Matrimony as soon as possible has resulted in permission for the marriage of Lawrence Elwin Burdick, seventeen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert N. Burdick of this city, and Miss Helen May Reynolds, seventeen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Reynolds of Manchester, N. H.

The city clerk here had to wait from September 5 to the 17th before the prospective bridegroom reached his 17th year. The consent of both parents has been granted and the local court, appealed to for permission, sanctions the ceremony. They are soon to be married and will make their home here.

'JEKYLL-HYDE' CLAIMS ALIBI IN ATTACK CASE

The defence of William L. Ahern, alleged attacker of fourteen-year-old Alphonse Provost of Prince street, Salem, and the man whom police [illegible] may be the connecting link in [illegible] series of brutal, maniacal attacks upon Salem boys, will be an alibi.

And slowly the police are weaving what is termed a "Dr. Jekell and Mr. Hyde" history of Ahern with which the prosecution hopes to batter down his alibi when he goes on trial Friday in Salem Court.

The prosecution will attempt to show that Ahern, by day a mild and inoffending reader of water meters for the city of Salem, was at night a vulture who preyed on youth and gloated in his depravity.

They will picture him as a kindly Dr. Jekyll," forty-eight years old, unmarried and contributing toward the upkeep of a home at No. 32 Webb street, Salem, which he jointly occupied with a brother and two sisters, highly respected and well thought of by neighbors and their children.

This picture of Ahern they will ruthlessly characterize as a mask, assumed by him to shelter the character of "Hyde." And in support of the "Jekyll-Hyde" theory they will call as witnesses the two men who held the Provost boy's assailant a few minutes after the attack.

Both they and the boy victim agree in identifying him as the boy's attacker. So confident is their identification that police hope that they may establish a connection between the present case and the series of brutal boy attacks, including the gruesome murder of little Henry McMahon.

Should marriage be forbidden by Law?

One man married and of his 1200 descendants who have been studied, not one has been a worthwhile citizen. Another man married. 1400 of his descendants have been studied—and not one has been unworthy of his citizenship. What made the difference?

There are some people who have absolutely no right to marry. Suppose you were one of them? Or one of your children? Would you voluntarily forego matrimony? Do you think the State should have the right, in any circumstance, to forbid it? Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, in an extraordinary article "The Rights of the Unborn," discusses this great problem fearlessly.

Dr. Wiley's proposal should be read by every mother and father, and by every man and woman contemplating marriage. It appears in October Good Housekeeping.

What is wrong with Main Street?

Main Street has been villified. Its faults, frequently exaggerated, have been exposed to ridicule. But there is another side to Main Street, a normal, human, lovable side. Main Street is still the backbone of the country. It has its drama, its romance. It has its tragic figures, its whimsical souls, its whole-hearted, generous characters.

That is why we are pleased to announce Florence Bingham Livingston's great serial, "Under a Thousand Eyes," which shows in an unforgettable manner, the other side of Main Street—the side of Main Street which is seen by Heather Davenway after eight years in New York. Read the first long installment in October Good Housekeeping.

The discovery of God Almighty

And "Then, as the mists enshrouding the early eons begin to lift, one great figure, in whom the spiritual impulses which strain forward are blended and exemplified, emerges dimly but colossally."

Abraham—the very first of that long and stately procession of great men which the human race has produced! Abraham who first of all the men in history discovered the Almightiness of God!

There is inspiration for you in the dynamic influence of this plain-spoken article of Basil King's, "The Discovery of God." Its very matter-of-factness is more moving than any form of emotionalism could be—and more perfectly attuned to the practical materialism of the times in which we live.

You will not want to miss this profoundly important feature in October Good Housekeeping. Is the God of Abraham your God today? Get the magazine now—the very biggest issue in two years of big issues.

Why the Bonus Bill Was Vetoed by President

Washington, Sept. 20—President Harding based his veto of the bonus bill largely on the ground of the failure of Congress to provide a method and the consequent heavy drain it would prove on the treasury. He made it clear that the interest on the foreign debt could not be relied upon, asserting that even taking into account such payments as were likely to be received from that source the treasury faced a deficit of $650,000,000 this fiscal year and an even further shortage in the succeeding year.

The President declared that enactment of the measure would wipe out the result of the administration's economy program.

FORD BIGGEST BANKER IN AMERICA

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, Sept. 20.—"Henry Ford has in the Ford Motor Company the largest income and, if capitalized, the largest capital in the world," the Wall Street Journal says in a leading article today.

"Profits before taxes in 1922 will exceed $125,000,000. After taxes they will be $110,000,000, about $100 a share. With these earnings the Ford Motor Company could be capitalized at $2,000,000,000 and pay 5 per cent on that capital.

"Ford condemns bankers, but with $18,000,000 cash he himself is the largest individual banker in this country, if not in the world. Michigan sugar beet growers and automobile manufacturers have little need for such a stupendous sum and only a few millions are banked in Detroit. Wall Street—the finance of the country—absorbs the other millions and Ford accumulated profits expand and multiply with Wall Street assistance.

AND MORE PROFIT.

"In his newspaper interviews Ford says that Wall street and the gold standard have outlived their usefulness, but his millions flok through to Wall street at 4 per cent. to bring his company a possible $7,200,000 gold standard money annually in interest. This is more than $6 for every car he produces. His replacement parts business is so profitable that he could choke off his manufacturing profit of probably $50 a car and make more than $15,000,000 annually, or $14 on each car produced from the sale of parts necessary to keep the millions of Fords now on the roads in running condition.

NEVER ENDING GAIN.

"He could distribute this $14,000,000 as a bonus to his workmen and still make the $6 a car profit from interest.

"But he is not selling at cost. He is holding onto profits from interest, parts and cars. Fifty-eight million dollars is the record ten months ended last February, despite the heavy taxes, $110,000,000 in probability after taxes in 1922."

O'Hare, Loyal Coalition Foe, Hangs Self

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN CELL

Accuser of George W. Solley, Formerly of Loyal Coalition, Hangs Self in Police Station

Christopher J. O'Hare, complainant against George W. Soley, former secretary of the Loyal Coalition when sensational charges were preferred, attempted suicide at Lagrange street police station early today.

Christopher J. O'Hare.

O'Hare, arrested at West and Washington streets for intoxication after a fight, knotted his belt about his throat, fastened one end to the bars and then lunged forward.

Passing policemen cut him down and took him to Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he asked that he be sent to Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

Judge Lourie in Municipal Court ordered O'Hare sent to Psychopathic for two weeks. It then became known that Special Officer Higgins of Dudley street police station had a warrant for O'Hare in his own name and the alias of Arthur Davenport, charging him with being an idle and disorderly person.

ASKS OUSTING OF PARK BOARD

The controversy between the Park Commission of Medford and the Medford Post of the American Legion, as a result of the refusal of the Commission to allow the Legion to use Medford Common for a carnival, had its culmination in the formal demand, made by the Medford Board of Aldermen for the resignation of every member of the Commission.

Some time ago the Legion asked for the use of the Common for the carnival and the request was denied because of the fact that the Common had been used by out-of-town enterprises during the past, without question, the Legion took its case before the Aldermen.

A subsequent meeting of the board was held, at which all members of the Park Commission, which controls the Common, were asked to appear to explain their attitude. None of the members appeared.

POSTPONE HEARING ON ASTOR ST. CASES

Mildred Sanford and George Hinant, who were arrested in a raid at No. 70 Astor street, Back Bay, are being held on the charges of drunkenness and misconduct, to September 27. Ruth Merrill, also in the [illegible] pleaded guilty today on the [illegible] of drunkenness. Her case was filed. John Kelliher of the same address was arrested later on a charge of disturbing the peace. [illegible] case was dismissed.

TRUCK LOSES BOUT WITH TROLLEY CAR

An auto truck crashed into an Arlington Centre car at Bristol road and Broadway, West Somerville. The truck was overturned and the two men on it thrown to the street. They were John G. J. Thompson, driver of the truck, of No. 7 Howe street, Dorchester, and Charles Thifault, No. 1 Hadley street, North Cambridge. Both men were shaken up but not seriously injured.

Can't Have Garages at 2 Back Bay Mansions

Rah for George C. Neal and the PRO-LE-TAR-I-AT!

This decision came with the refusal of a permit to Fred L. Blood of No. 124 Commonwealth avenue and Anna L. Johnson of No. 118 Commonwealth avenue to build garages in the rear of their residences.

SCRAPPY GIRLS IN BACK BAY MIXUP

Patrolmen Granley, Grossberg and Sullivan paced their beats in the Back Bay. All was quiet. Screams of women shattered the stillness.

Straight to No. 70 Astor street the trail led, where the police found Mildred Sanford and Ruth Merrill in the street, hair dishevelled screaming for help.

Inside, in the apartment of one George Hinant, was George himself, badly battered, still not quite so battered as the suite.

Also there was another man, the cause of the trouble, it appears. Confiding to the patrolmen, the girls averred that the stranger sought to make love to Mildred Sanford, whereupon there was a movie style battle with Hinant.

Queen Irene, who resides now at No. 12 Hudson street, today appeared with counsel, and having waived examination, was held in $1,000 to await action of the Federal Grand Jury.

LOVE WINS HUSBAND FREEDOM

Girl Bride Proves Her Divorced Mate Had Legal Right to Wed Again

Love of his bride caused Emil Gagnon to serve a jail sentence for an offence he never committed.

And love for her husband led Rose Sylvian Gagnon to carry on an investigation that eventually disclosed the truth and effected the release of the man.

The youthful husband was accused of making false statement to a marriage license in Salem and was taken to that city from Lawrance where they were making their home.

ILLEGAL MARRIAGE CHARGED.

Gagnon had said, in applying for the license, that he had been married before, but that he had secured a divorce and was free to re-wed. The officials charged, however, that his divorce had not become absolute, and that his marriage to Miss Sylvian was illegal.

Brought into court here, Gagnon became confused. He insisted that he had sincerely believed he was free to marry, but admitted that he might have been mistaken. When the officers assured him that his divorce decree was not yet absolute, he decided they were right and pleaded guilty to the charge.

He was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction. His bride, however, never wavered in her love. After telling her family that she would stand by her husband through thick and thin, she set out to find just what were the facts in the case.

BRIDE FINDS RECORD.

From Salem she finally found her way to Pawtucket, R. I. There she began delving through records, in search of some light on her husband's past.

After several days' searching, she found the record she was after. This record showed that her husband's divorce from his first wife became absolute on July 1. Miss Sylvian had married him on July 12, eleven days after he had been legally a free man to marry.

FILES DRUNK CHARGE AGAINST 2 AUTOISTS

Arthur Gunning of Mellen street, Dorchester, in the U. S. Consular service, and Joseph W. Flynn of Wheatland avenue were in the Roxbury Court today charged with drunkenness. Their case was filed. They were in an automobile operated by Flynn on Columbia road when arrested. A warrant was applied for, charging operation of a machine while under the influence of liquor in violation of the auto law, but refused.

SECOND CONVICT CAUGHT

Warner Hiding in Long Island Cellar After Escaping From Deer Island

Crouched, ready to spring, Charles Warner, escaped Deer Island "bad man," lay hidden in a Long Island cellar while armed guards scoured Winthrop and East BoBston, five miles away.

A curious inmate of Long Island Hospital heard faint sounds from the old cellar and reported the matter to attendants.

A few minutes later "Bad Man" Warner was overpowered and word rushed to the man-hunters in Winthrop.

Previously Guard George A. Nelson reported having seen Warner on a train near Winthrop Beach and asserted he had leaped into the shallow waters facing the Elks' Club.

Warner fled from the island in an open rowboat after he had remained in hiding in a corn field since early Monday.

The flight of Warner and Frederick Randell Monday morning amid a hail of bullets led to discovery of a plot for a jail delivery of at least four prisoners.

Discovery of sawed bars in four cell doors started an investigation that resulted in the unhatching of a plot negineered by Warner which was to have resulted in a break for liberty by Jack Coughlin and John Murray.

BETRAYED PALS.

Warner and Randell are believed to have "double-crossed" the other two for instead of waiting until the appointed zero hour, 4:30 Tuesday morning, they forced the tampered bars twenty-four hours earlier.

Crawling on hands and knees, his feet shoeless, Warner emerged from his corn field hiding place today and crept to the boat kept to transport guards and employes from the island to Point Shirley.

He worked so silently Guard George A. Nelson failed to hear the slightest sound, even though his station of duty is but a few feet from the boat.

ASK COURT SETTLE WILL QUESTION

Mrs. Constance J. Bessey of Newton, daughter of the late Herbert B. Cushing, who was for years head of Chauncy Hall School, asked the Supreme Court today to instruct her as to what persons and in what proportions she shall convey a fund of $4,327.83 in bonds and savings accounts which she found in an envelope among her father's effects marked "Chauncy Hall Scholarship." As executriv of her father's will Mrs. Bessey is in doubt as to disposition of this.

Mrs. Bessey says she is satisfied that her father did not leave a fund for the Chauncy Hall scholarship. She did find that he had given $5 a month for years to the Chauncy Hall Scholarship of the Caney Creek Community Centre, Inc., of Pippa pass, Ky., conducted by Alice S. G. Lloyd, former pupil at Chauncy Hall. But Mrs. Bessey says that institution makes no claim to the fund.

FAMILY HEIRLOOMS LOST IN $3,000 FIRE

Treasured antiques and family heirlooms were damaged when fire caused loss of $3,000 to a stable and dwelling at No. 130 Prince street, Jamaica Plain, today. The house is a part of the Francis C. Balch estate and is occupied by Miss Anna Balch.

BRIGADES of bugs, water and cockroaches marched through the rooms of Mrs. Alexander MacKinnon, manoeuvred into position and attacked with such frenzy that Mrs. MacKinnon was forced to sound an alarm for a bug exterminator—From complaints to Rent Commission about Reservoir Court.

CLAIMS RATS PLAYING TAG BREAK DISHES

RATS AT PLAY AS THE RENT GOES UP

Fragrant garbage continues to add fuel to the fire of indignation that is sweeping through fashionable Reservoir Court, No. 1870 Beacon street, as result of the raising of rents.

Meanwhile rats are causing havoc, gnawing holes in expensive cedar chests and fine linen table cloths, and even have lunched heartily on shoes and other wearing apparel, of the tenants.

Rats playing tag broke dishes in the apartment of Mrs. Louise C. Wyman, while brigades of water bugs and cockroaches marched through the suite of Mrs. Alexander MacKinnon in such number she was forced to sound an alarm for an exterminator.

Gas stoves in certain suites failed to work, while rain dripped dismally into the apartment of John Silver.

All these and more are the plaints of the suite lessees to the Rent Commission against the orders of Owner Charles Spring that all rents should be boosted just an even $10 a month.

Says Owner Spring, "I just must raise rents to get a fair and decent return on the $282,000 I paid for the property." It seems that he was just one day too late on the purchase of the building for the day previous the man who sold it to him bought it for $185,000.

Over in another section of the fashionable apartment house Mrs. Wyman chuckled as she told how startled her husband had been when he saw rats playing tag and how they had knocked some of her choice dishes to the floor.

300 IN PERIL ON CALVIN AUSTIN

Three hundred persons were in danger when the Boston and New York steamer Calvin Austin lost her rudder as she struck the bank of the Cape Cod Canal early today.

With the tide racing out, the helpless steamer crashed against one bank and rolled dangerously in the stream.

Responding to calls for assistance, several nearby tug boats made fast to the Austin and prevented an accident.

She is proceeding to Boston steered by tug boats. The steamer is expected to land around noon.

CITIES TO FIGHT BANK CLAIM OF $10,000,000

More than 300 cities and towns of the State will be asked to join with the city of Boston in the big legal fight to prevent the national banks from obtaining in excess of $10,000,000 which they assert they have been taxed illegally.

The plans for a united fight were announced today by Attorney Edward E. Clark for Boston at the first public hearing by the Recess Committee on Banks and Banking.

Mr. Clark said the banks are demanding the refund of $10,000,000 because they claim their bank shares were taxed at their full value, while the investments of big banking houses like Kidder, Peabody and Lee, Higginson Company were paying only the tax on their incomes.

"The cities and towns cannot afford to lose that money," said Mr. Clark, "and they will be invited to unite in a concerted attempt to secure the passage of a law that will not deprive us of that income."

George E. Brock of the Savings Bank Association urged the passage of laws that would enable the savings banks to invest in the equipment bonds of public service corporations and to extend the field of investment in the bonds of other States.

Mrs. Stiles Names Miss Huff as Too Friendly With War Camp Singer

Talk about a domestic huff! Mrs Eugenie Stiles, the Parisian wife of Vernon Stiles, Boston's honey-throated tenor, says that there was a "Huff" in her domestic affairs and that this Huff's first name is Hester.

Furthermore, Mrs. Stiles alleges that her singing husband was improperly familiar with a certain girl named Adams, a bareback rider. Mrs. Stiles names Miss Huff and Miss Adams in a divorce action she had filed against Stiles; also charging him with cruel and abusive treatment.

News of the suits in Androscoggin County Court at Auburn, Me., arrived today in Boston, where it will hold wide spread interest for opera goers, veterans who were at Camp Devens in the early part of 1918 and for others who have come in contact with Stiles.

Vernon Stiles

Stiles has sung in Chicago grand opera and the Metropolitan; also as soloist for the Philharmonic Orchestra of Philadelphia. Previously he had sung abroad, having been heard in Vienna and Berlin opera houses.

SANG FOR SOLDIERS.

Late in 1917 he was engaged by the government agencies for camp welfare as song leader at Camp Devens. Late the following January he suddenly resigned because singing in the open air tended to impair his voice. There was report that he had been accused by some of the soldiers of being unpatriotic, but this report was investigated by the War Department, which completely exonerated the song master.

Stiles introduced at Devens a parody on "Tipperary." The chorus ran:

"It's a hard job to lick the Kaiser;
It's a hard job to do.
It's a hard job to lick the Kaiser
And the Allies know it, too.
There's only one can lick the Kaiser,
That's the Red, White and Blue."

Regiments of soldiers were asked to sing this song in unison. The bare intimation that it was a hard job to whip the Kaiser apparently gave offence to some of the soldiers and a buzz of discontent ran around until concrete expressions like "unpatriotic" and the like were heard. Meanwhile, Stiles resigned as song master and, having been fully exonerated by the War Department, was put on special assignment to speak for the forthcoming Liberty Loan.

MINISTER'S AUTO SMASHES INTO TRUCK

An auto truck operated by Albert F. Smith of No. 31 Jay street, Somerville, collided with an auto driven by the Rev. J. Franklin Knox, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Northampton. Although the minister's car was jammed back twenty feet by the force of the crash, he was uninjured.

50 AUTOISTS FINED $180 IN ROXBURY

Fifty motorists were in Roxbury Court charged with violations of the motor laws today. Two paid fines of $25 each for failing to stop when ordered and $5 additional for speeding. They were Harold Yandell of No. 20 Halifax street, Jamaica Plain, and Edward C. Marchant of Fourth street, East Cambridge. The fines in all totalled $180.

FIRST SCRIMMAGE GIVES LINE ON MAKEUP OF B. C. ELEVEN

CAVANAUGH GIVES 'EM ALL A CHANCE

In the first scrimmage of the season at Alumni Field, Coach Cavanaugh gave [illegible] for the Boston College eleven a [illegible] to show their ability. From the way the two teams battled, with neither able to score, it looks as though the coach will have a fairly strong first line, with a second line of reserves little inferior to the first.

As was expected, Jack Heaphy played his old position at centre. Jack showed the same old fight [illegible] famous, and it is likely that he will remain at the pivot post throughout the season.

[illegible] centre of last season's eleven, played [illegible] it is likely that "Cav" will groom "Dyger" to fill his brother Jim's place, as Heaphy will be able to take care of centre.

The shifting of McManus, wingman last year, [illegible] expected. O'Connell, captain of Dean Academy last year, played end opposite Comerford.

Paton and Keahane, tackles, completed the line. It is probable that there will be changes made in the line before the season starts, as usually the first team personnel is not finally decided until after the season begins.

Donnellan at quarter, Darling and Matthews at half, and Captain Bill Kelleher at full completed the first team backfield. There is less likelihood that any big change will be made in the backfield, as the quartet named are regulars and experienced men.

In the second line, "Tiger" Jack Reardon played centre, flanked by Pyne and Elberry, with Donoghue and Kozlowsky at tackle, and Melley and Duffey on the wings.

Steve Patten directed the play of the second team, with Ward at full and Eddie Phillips and Corcoran completing the backfield.

Although neither of the first two teams were able to score, the scrimmage was fast and scrappy. As the college opens today instead of Thursday, yesterday marked the end of the double practice sessions. From now on, scrimmage practice will make up the bigger part of the work for the Eagle candidates, and another week should give a clearer idea of the make-up of the first eleven.

The first scrimmage brought forth the first casualty of the season, with Bill Melley as the victim. Melley, a promising end candidate, suffered an injury to his shoulder early in the fray, and upon later examination it was said that he will be out for a couple of weeks at least.

RIDDLE'S HORSES IN THE SOUTH FOR WORK

Havre De Grace, Md., Sept. 20.—The horses of S. D. Riddle were early arrivals from Saratoga and are quartered in the E. F. Simmus barn. Others to ship here from the Spa were T. J. Shannon, M. J. Marphy and a division of the Samuel Ross stable.

N. Y. U. Eleven in Camp

New York, Sept. 20.—New York University's football squad, fifty-five strong, went into camp at Fort Slocum for ten days of hard work prior to the opening of school. In addition to his more than half a hundred candidates for the team, Head Coach Tom Thorp took with him all his regular assistants.

SEVEN SCHOOL GAMES FOR SATURDAY

By FRED C. LANE.

A dozen or more coaches will have their first chance on Saturday to witness the action of the respective teams in competition, as seven games will take place on the half-holiday. Whether or not the fundamentals of football that have been drilled into their players for the past three weeks has taken root is one insight that will be given these mentors.

The athletic fields at Somerville, Everett, Malden and Brookline will all seethe with activity, for each of these high school teams will be sent in to win their first game of the season. It will mark the official opening of the football season in these parts and will be welcomed most cordially by the fans.

The Providence Tech team will line up against "Dutch" Ayer's boys at Somerville; St. John's Prep, led by "Jiggs" Donahue, will show their wares against Everett High; Woburn and Malden will open up hostilities at Malden and Winthrop will play at Old Tech Field, Brookline.

In addition to these local games, Mansfield High and Marblehead have a question to settle at the Seaside town; Somersworth High invades Haverhill for a contest with St. James High; and Needham plays Lexington at the latter's athletic field.

It will be a big day for King Football, and also for the youngsters who are wearing the moleskins for the first time. Seldom if ever has interest in the grid game been so widespread and intense.

The old cry that was heard about this time in previous years concerning lack of material is missing this year. In fact, the turnouts have gone far beyond expectations, for hardly a coach in the Greater Boston schools can give his attention single-handed to his work, which in previous years was directed towards a certain few.

ONE OF THE BEST IN NEW ENGLAND

Gertrude McLaughlin

The past season has developed several champions among the mermaids all over the country. Although the above photo does not show a champion, one may say that Miss Gertrude McLaughlin, daughter of James W. McLaughlin, former bath commissioner of the city of Boston, is considered one of the best in New England.

Miss McLaughlin has won a number of swims at the beaches this season and claims the fifteen-year-old girls' swimming title for fifty yards at Onset. Besides winning a cup at this event she has numerous other trophies which she has won splashing her way through the breakers. Her time for the half-century mark is thirty-three seconds.

MICKEY WALKER IN TRAINING AGAIN

Mickey Walker has recovered from his recent attack of stomach trouble and has resumed training. Jack Bulger wires us from Newark, N. J., that he has signed his protege to mingle with Dave Rosenberg at Newark on September 25.

Mickey Walker

Rosenberg, like Walker, is a rough, tough fellow who relies upon aggressiveness and a punch to win. As a result there should be plenty of action when he starts swapping blows with Mickey.

ONWARD WINS IN SPRINGFIELD RACE

Springfield, Sept. 20.—Tuesday's light harness racing at the Exposition Grounds attracted a large gathering of fans.

Three classes were held. Almaden Onward won the stake for 2:11 pacers, Little Mary the 2:20 stake trot, while Peter Pfaff came through in the $800 purse for 2:14 trotters.

Today's card consists of four classes, the two-year-old trot, 2:20 pace stake, the 2:13 pace and the 2:24 trot.

RIDER KEATING IS OUT OF THE SADDLE

Havre De Grace, Md., Sept. 20.—Bill Keating, a veteran jumping rider, known to racegoers the country over, was seriously injured in a fall on the local steeplechase course while schooling a green fencer owned by George Saportas.

GEORGE KOTSONAROS

By JACK CONWAY.

"Cops! Cops!"

Paul Bowser, who puts on the big wrestling matches at the Grand Opera House, let his glance rest on the left hand of George Kotsonaras, Greek light-heavyweight champion.

"Cops! Cops!"

Bowser's summons attracted an army of office boys and a flock of reporters, but apparently none of the guardians of the law were lingering in the vicinity of the sporting department. Many thanks!

"Wot's all the shooting for?" said Gill as he recalled one of William's line at a recent show up at Danny Shea's playshop.

"Wherethehell are all the cops?" demanded Bowser.

"We ain't got no liquor," interrupted one of the office boys. "You got a nerve to come in here asking for something to be put into the paper and then try to sic the cops on the joint."

IN NEED OF DIMMERS.

"You make as much noise as Battling Nelson did in the old days," we ventured.

Bowser then started blinking his eyes.

"I say, put that searchlight out of the way," he continued. "Doesn't the Massachusetts law require dimmers?"

"I get you," said Kotsonaras [illegible] true American fashion. "Sure I need a flock of cops to protect me from you wrestling promoters. I am courageous to parade around without a police escort."

The Greek champion then gazed at a huge diamond he had in a platinum setting on his left hand.

"It's eight karats," he remarked. "It is worth $8,000, which is a lot of money even these days. But I value it much more than that. It was presented to me by the Khedive of Egypt when I won the amateur wrestling championship of that country back in 1909. I have since held it as one of my choicest treasures."

HARD TEST FOR CHAMPION

The Greek champion forgot his diamond long enough to tell us that he expected to win over Ivan Rodacky, Polish wrestler, when he battles that worthy in a finish match at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night, under the direction of the Old Howard management.

Kotsonaras made his Boston debut a week ago, when he disposed of Cyclone Ress at the Grand Opera House.

The Greek champion is planning to make his home in Boston, as he has replaced Jimmy Londos as the idol of our Greek colony.

As for his eight karat ring, Kotsonaras believes he is well able to protect himself against a regiment or so of robbers.

One glance at his huge form and you realize that there is no occasions for the Greek champion to cry:

"Cops! Cops!"

JOHNNY BROWN IS UNDER CALCIUM

Newport Johnny Brown, batting under the management of Chick Hayes, has been doing some bang-up work in the ring.

Johnny Brown.

Brown was always a mighty classy ring warrior, but he didn't always give the necessary amount of attention to his training.

Hays, who conducts a gym in Bowdoin square with Harry Kelly as his side kick, then took Brown in charge. The result has been that the Newport youth has been batting along at a 1,000 clip.

MURRAY TO TRAIN WESTMINSTER

Tommy Murray of Jamaica Plain is already planning for the opening of the hockey season. Tommy is young man who trains the crack Westminster hockey team which will have New Haven as a home town during the coming campaign. The Jamaica Plain man's ability as a trainer of athletes had much to do with the success of the Westminster team last season.

Tommy Murray.

Murray was trainer of the 1921 Sox and was largely responsible for nursing Joe Bush back to winning form. Bush's arm was of little service until Tommy took the speed king in charge.

RAY POWELL VICTIM OF QUEER ACCIDENT

Ray Powell, fleet centre fielder of the Braves, was forced to quit yesterday's game at Braves Field in the ninth inning, the victim of a freak accident. Powell fouled off a ball that bounded back from Umpire McCormack's chest protector and struck Powell in the eye. His vision was impaired for a few moments, and Tony Boeckel batted for him.

ROGERS HORNSBY RUNS STRING TO 33

Rogers Hornsby, leading hitter of the National League, ran his string of consecutive hitting to 33 games yesterday, when he drove a single by Dinty Barbare in the seventh inning of the game at Braves Field.

HARVARD PLAYERS IN SIGNAL PRACTICE

Coach Bob Fisher had the seventy-nine lucky members of the Harvard varsity squad in the Stadium for their first signal practice of the season. The seventy-nine, battling for berths on the first eleven, will spend their spare time in the next few days, that they are not in the Stadium, boning up on the stuff that Charlie Buell will bark this Fall.

"Skull" practice is the bane of many a gridiron star's existence. Many a brain has gone nearly blooey rattling off the combinations and mixing them and unmixing them.

The players are beginning to feel that progress is being made and the long-looked-for football practice is a reality. The fights grow hotter for the places.

Gene McGillen, who played at the tackle berth on the freshman varsity last Fall, has switched to end where he played yesterday in practice. Lou Gordon, who played right field for Conlon's diamond aggregation last Spring, and who is captain of this Winter's basketball team, was on the other extremity of the line. McGillen is a Worcester Academy product and is on his way to a berth somewhere in the Crimson vanguard.

These shifts are nothing more than an experiment as Harvard's weakest spots are the wings. A combination must be found which will take the place of the Macomber-Crocker duo of last Fall. The emergency that exists is best signified by the fact that all the men who reported as candidates for the ends were retained on the first squad.

The game with Middlebury is the first of the season but Harvard at the present is thinking of nothing but the Holy Cross game on Oct. 7. In 1920 and 1921 Charlie Buell kicked a field goal that sent the Worcesterites back at the tail end of a 3-to-0 score.

Winnie Churchill has written that he will be on hand tomorrow. He will be the last of the Crimson candidates to show. It was expected that he would punch the clock along with Owen and Coburn last Monday but "Winnie" is a great boy for his vacations. It will not make much difference, however, if Winnie only brings those well trained feet of his back in prime shape.

CAMBRIDGE CITY TO PLAY MAGOUN SQUARE

The Cambridge City Club will meet the Magoun Square Civics, champions of Somerville, at Russell field next Sunday. This promises to be one of the best games put on the field this season, as there is keen rivalry between the two clubs, and both managers will send their first string pitchers to the mound. This game will undoubtedly crowd Russell field to capacity, as all Somerville is going over to root for their team, while Cambridge will be out en masse to back up the home team.

GREEN NEEDS A REAL GOOD PUNTER

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 20.—Dartmouth's football squad got into the first scrimmage of the year in its longest and hardest practice sessions of the year. No attempts were made at scoring, the backs stopping as soon as they got through the line.

Brad Foss, a sophomore and newcomer in Hanover football, was tried out at guard in the first eleven and gave a creditable account of himself. Foss starred for Choate School before coming to Dartmouth but was ineligible to play in his freshman team. He took the place of Red Lee as guard on team A, Lee being tried out at a half back position.

Several teams were tried in the scrimmage, each being given a chance on offense and defence for about ten minutes. All the elevens presented a powerful offence considering the few plays they had to work with.

The whole squad was given a long tackling practice, the backs and ends getting a particularly hard session.

The need of a good punter impresses itself daily on the coaches and all the backs are being given a chance to see what they can do in the kicking line. Roger Harris, captain of the freshmen team, two years ago, still weakened by an attack of malaria and unable to do any vigorous work, is punting farther than any other kicker. It is a problem just how soon Harris will be in shape to play, but Trainer Jack Watson hopes to have him in shape by the middle of the season.

FOOTBALL MEN TO MEET TOMORROW

Tomorrow evening at the Boston Athletic Association there will be a meeting held under the auspices of the Association of New England Football Officials. It will be called to order at 8:15 p. m.

George V. Brown

George V. Brown, who is well known among the sporting element of New England and who is secretary-treasurer of the association, will preside. The meeting is to instruct the members on the new football rules.

DAVE SHADE OUT AFTER SHEVLIN

Dave Shade, best of the fighting Shade brothers, wants two bouts. Jack Britton and Eddie Shevlin are the welterweights whom Dave would like to wallop on the [illegible]

Leo Flynn is so unkind as to charge that Britton has dodged a meeting with Shade since the latter went fifteen rounds to a draw with the welterweight boss.

STAFFORD AND McGLONE AT HARVARD

"Give me a good quarterback and I'll give you a football team," [illegible] has been the wail of many a coach, who should lead [illegible] followers of Harvard football start boasting about the chances of the Harvard freshman football eleven this season, which will have numbered among the squad at least two of the classiest field generals sent up from high or prep school circles.

Joe McGlone

Joe McGlone, Exeter captain, is already working with the varsity candidates at Cambridge, while "Jake" Stafford, intercollegiate [illegible] from Newton High, was also taken [illegible] the Crimson entrance examinations. Both lads possess every gridiron qualification and bid fair to lead the Harvard freshman team to one of its best seasons.

McGlone is the fifth son of Natick to be developed within a short period of time, four of whom chose Harvard and one Dartmouth. Eddie Mahan, Eddie Casey and Billy Murray who gained fame at Harvard, and "Chick" Burke, Dartmouth captain, would form one of the most popular all-American backfields experts could select.

The Future Greats

Coach George Sexton of Lynn English has the same backfield that he had last year. The three boys have teamed for three years.

"Holly" Curran, chosen all-scholastic full back by the scribes in the North Shore circuit last season, is captain at Swampscott.

The annual Groton game stares Coach Fred Murray of English High in the face for Saturday. Fred has the rest of this week to whip his squad into shape for this event.

Coach Jack McDonald and his Malden team will have some opposition to face when they play Woburn at Malden on Saturday. Malden trounced Woburn last year for its only defeat of the season and practically the same team will meet Malden aggregation on the week-end.

Arthur "Mike" Ray, former Lynn English and Dean Academy star, has reported to Coach Cleo O'Donnell for football practice at Holy Cross. Ray was the mainstay in the box for Coach Dan Sullivan's Dean Academy team and his work for Coach Sexton at Lynn English won the baseball championship of the North Shore League in 1920.

Myles Toulouse and Bob Buckley, both of Somerville High last season, are now with Dean and have made a favorable impression on Coach Sullivan.

* * *

Joe Tansey will be lost to Coach Ray Pendleton's Marblehead team on October 21. Joe passes the age limit then. The North Shore team will lose one of the best backfield men who ever carried their colors.

Track Star in Match Race Against Thoroughbred

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Allan Woodring, Syracuse University sprinter, will get a new test of speed on Friday, during the track meet which will feature the State convention of the American Legion.

Allan Woodring

Woodring will race eighty yards against a running horse. The horse, after years of service in thoroughbred races, starts from the mark and has been timed over the eighty-yard route in nine seconds the time which Woodring at his best can equal. In fact, Woodring has stepped eighty yards in 8 2-5 seconds.

LYNN FANS ARE ALL UP FOR FRIBERG

Mayor Harland A. McPhetres of Lynn has arranged with the Braves to have "Friberg" day observed next Monday afternoon at Braves Field, when the Cubs and the Braves will stage their last series in Boston.

The day will be in honor of Bernie Friberg of Lynn, a member of the Cubs' infield. The Mayor has arranged with leading Lynn citizens to present Friberg with a host of silver and other gifts. A committee made up of the Mayor, Jud Cutler, Red Callahan, Earle Lawrence, and Francis P. O'Neill are handling arrangements for the affair.

Friberg is a popular Lynn boy, a former Lynn English High School baseball and football star and gained considerable fame for himself as a member of the last Cornets of Lynn. He has been playing a fine brand of ball for the Cubs this year.

Several hundred Lynn fans will jaunt out to the Allston ball yard Monday to pay tribute to a native son who has made good with the big show.

FRED SULLIVAN AT B. C. HIGH

Boston College High School's basketball team, always one of the strongest school fives in the State, will be greatly strengthened if Fred Sullivan is allowed to compete for the James Street School team. Sullivan, well known Pere Marquette player, will prep at B. C. H. in anticipation of entering Boston College next Fall. Sullivan is considered one of the fastest forwards playing the net game in this section.

LEWISTON CLUB TO STAGE SHOW

Lewiston, Me., Sept. 20.—Boxing will be resumed here September 29. The Business Men's A. C., under the direction of Denny Dunn, Maine's best referee, and Tom Breen, will put on the show. Kid Dubs of this city, bantamweight champion of Maine, has planned to go to Boston in a short time with "Spin" Mahoney of this city.

SOCCER CLUBS MUST PAY FINES

By ART CURLY.

The officials of the Boston District Soccer League are determined to enforce their rulings and by-laws to the limit this season and erring players and clubs will have to watch their steps pretty close.

At the last meeting of the executive committee, five league clubs were fined one dollar each for failing to play scheduled games and were given until September 19, to pay. These clubs are the Lynn Gas & Electric, St. George, Saxony Mills, South Boston Celtics and the Electric Thistles.

Thus far Secretary Wilford has heard from only one club, the Electric Thistles. The executive committee has decided to give each delinquent club until Saturday morning to pay its fine in, otherwise it will stand suspended and the games scheduled will be called off until it does the right thing.

The new league by-laws are in the hands of the printer and will be available for distribution among the clubs, players and fans in a few days. Those wishing a copy should notify Tom Wilford, Andrew court, Malden, at once.

GANS EASY WINNER OVER NATE SIEGAL

New York, Sept. 19.—Italian Joe Gans' easily defeated Nate Siegal of Boston in the stellar event of twelve rounds at the reopening show at the Pioneer A. C. Gans won ten rounds while the other two were even. Siegal, who injured his right hand early in the contest did not have a chance with the rugged Brooklynite.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Holyoke—Mickey Travers beat Jimmy Cooney, ten rounds; Joey Leonard knocked out Joe Moran, three rounds; Blackie LaBelle knocked out Mickey Blaine, two rounds.

At New York—Italian Joe Gans of Brooklyn got the decision over Nate Siegal of Boston in 12 rounds.

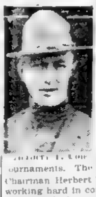
DILBOY POST TO HOLD A SHOW ON OCT. 5

The George Dilboy Post No. [illegible] V. F. W. of Somerville, will open the amateur boxing season on October [illegible] K. of C. Hall. During the past year this post contributed greatly to the success attained by the N. E. A. A. U. in Greater Boston, by staging some of the best shows ever witnessed, according to [illegible] of that organization who officiated at the tournaments.



[illegible] T. Cole

The committee under Chairman Herbert T. Cole, has been working hard in completing arrangements and the entries of the best simon-pures are being received together with many new entries of youngsters who are desirous of making their debut in the roped arena.

The classes are 112, 126, 135 and 147 pounds. Entries close October 1 with George A. Bowles, Room 3, K. of C. Building, Highland avenue, Somerville.

Lexington Meets Needham

The annual football game between Lexington High and Needham has been booked for Saturday afternoon, October 2, on Lexington Field. Lexington won from Needham last Fall.

By FREDERICK G. LIEB.

Another Yankee-Giant World's Series will see the leading third basemen of the two major leagues, Joe Dugan and Heine Groh, in competition. These two players would be newcomers in an all Manhattan World's Series, as a year ago Frankie Frisch still was covering third base for the New York Nationals, while Mike McNally and Frank Baker divided the third base assignment for the Yankees during the 1921 Worlds Series.

Joe Dugan

Oddly enough the tailend Red Sox of the American League provided third basemen for the two contenders in the Johnsonian circuit. Not only did the Red Sox sell Dugan to the Yanks, but they also unloaded Eddie Foster on the Browns. And Foster proved a valuable addition to the St. Louis pennant hunters. He is no Dugan, of course, and should the Browns get into the World's Series, third base would be regarded as their weak link. But remember what Johnny Rawlings, weak link of the Giants, did to the Yankees in the series of a year ago.

In the improbable event of Pittsburgh beating out the Giants for the National League pennant, the Pirates will have one of the crack youngsters in the game in Hal Traynor.

Should the Yankees win the American League pennant, the third base advantage in the World's Series would go to the junior league [illegible]. However if the Browns enter the series, either the Giants or Pirates would have a decided advantage at third.

Naturally Joe Dugan has had no world's series experience, for years he was exploring the cellar damp of the American League with his discoverer, Connie Mack, and this is the first year that Joe has come into the sunlight.

Hal Traynor

While his batting average of .299 is not as high as several of his averages [illegible] phia, Dugan is playing the game of his life. Few will contradict us when we say that "Jumping Joe" is the game's leading third baseman. He is a wonder at coming in for bunts, can let go of a ball from all angles, something on the order of Mike Doolan, a player Joe greatly resembles, and he is willing to get in front of anything smacked down to his bag, no matter how hard it travels.

Joe is fast, despite the fact that he has stolen only three bases up to the time our averages were closed. He can beat out bunts, though among his favorite hits are doubles down the left field foul line. He is a splendid player to follow "Whitey" Witt in the Yankee batting order.

Heinie Groh, who was acquired by McGraw last Winter to complete his all star infield, has slipped just enough this season for it to be perceptible. Especially has Heine fallen off at bat since the early part of the season. From a .340 gait, his hitting has fallen off to .280. This is the lowest Heine has hit since 1916.

Heinie Groh

All that has been said of Dugan's fielding goes for Groh. He too, has that faculty of scooping up slow rollers and firing to first without steadying himself for the peg.

Eddie Foster was not good enough earlier in the season to play regularly for a tail ender, he stepped into the breach at St. Louis and closed the gap the Browns had at third base, when Ellerbe became disabled. Playing with a pennant contender, Eddie displayed some of his former fielding ability, while he quickly jacked up his batting average from .210 to .252. He is a nifty hit-and-run man at bat, and quite skilled in the art of laying them down.

Eddie Foster

Man and Maid

By Elinor Glyn

START THIS NEW STORY TODAY

Sir Nicholas Thormonde, a wealthy Englishman, wounded and blinded in one eye in action, starts writing his diary in Paris while the war is still on. He is sick of life. The war has robbed it of all that a young man can find of joy. He tries to amuse himself in the company of several women friends, who, he feels, seek his company for his money and not for the love he craves. He starts to write a book and hires a typist, Miss Sharp.

Now Go On With the Story

SHE worked with her usual diligence the entire day almost, not taking the least notice of me, until at 5 o'clock when my tea came I rang for her—perhaps it was the irritation reacting upon my sensitive wrenched nerves, but I felt pretty rotten, my hands were damp—another beastly unattractive thing, which as a rule does not happen to me—I asked her to pour out the tea.

"If you will be so kind," I said, "I have let Burton go out"—Mercifully this was true—she came in as a person would who knew you had a right to command—you could not have said if she minded or no.

When she was near me I felt happier for some reason.

She asked me how I took my tea—and I told her—.

"Are you not going to have some with me?" I pleaded.

Mine is [illegible] on my table in the next room [illegible] and she rose.

[illegible] I [illegible] out—

"Please—do [illegible] I don't know why [illegible] I feel most awful rotten today."

She sat down again and poured out her cup.

"If you are suffering shall I read to you?" she said—"it might send you to sleep—" and somehow I fancied that while her firm mouth never softened, perhaps the eyes behind the horn spectacles might not be so stony. And yet with it all something in me resented her [illegible] which respond to sympathy, and the spirit rages at the knowledge that one has given way. I never felt so mad in all my year of hell that I cannot be a man and fight—as I did at that moment.

A [illegible] English books people were all always having tea—handing cups of [illegible]. The tea every chapter and every scene 'tea.' There is a great deal of truth in it—tea seems to bring the characters together—at tea time people talk, it is the excuse to call at that hour of leisure. We are too active as a nation to meet at any other time in the day, except for sport—So tea is our link and we shall go down through the ages as tea fiends—because our novelists who portray life accurately chronicle that most of the thrilling scenes of our lives pass among tea cups!—I ventured to say all this to Miss Sharp by way of drawing her into conversation.

"What could one describe as the French doing most often?" I asked her.

She thought a moment.

"They do not make excuses for anything they do, they have not to have a pretext for action as we have; they are much less hypocritical and [illegible]."

I wanted to make her talk—

"Why are we such hypocrites?"

"Because we have set up an impossible standard for ourselves, and hate to show each other that we cannot act up to it."

"Yes, we conceal every feeling—we show indifference when we feel interest—we pretend to have come on business when we have come simply to see someone we are attracted to."

She let the conversation drop. This provoked me, as her last remark showed how far from stupid she is.

That nervous feeling overcame me again. Confound the woman!

"Please read," I said at last in desperation, and I closed my one eye.

She picked up a book—it happened to be a volume of de Musset—and she read at random—her French is as perfect as her English. The last thing I remember was 'Mimi Pinson'—and when I awoke it was past six o'clock and she had gone home.

I wonder how many of us, since the war, know the desolation of waking—alone and in pain—and helpless—of course there must be hundreds. If I am a rotter and a coward about suffering, at all events it does not come out in words—and perhaps it is because I am such a mixture that I am able to write it in this journal. If I were purely English I should not be able to let myself go even here——

Suzette came to dinner—I thought how vulgar she looked—and that if her hands were white they were podgy and the nails short. The three black hairs irritated my cheek when she kissed me. I was brutal and moved my head in irritation——

"Tiens? Mon Ami!"—she said and pouted.

She did not think it necessary to reply to this.

"Amuse me!" I commanded.

"So, it is not love then, Nicholas, thou desirest—Bear!"

"Not in the least—I shall never want love again probably. Divert me!—tell me—tell me of your scheming little mouse's brain, and your kind little heart—How is it 'dans le metier'?"

Suzette settled herself on the sofa, curled up among the pillows like a plump little tabby cat. She lit a cigarette——

"Very middling," she whiffed. "Cases of love where all my good counsel remains untaken—a madness for drugs—very foolish—A drug—yes to try—but to continue! —Mon Dieu! they will no longer make fortunes 'dans le metier'—"

"When you have made your fortune, Suzette, what will you do with it?"

"I shall buy a farm for my mother—I shall put Georgine into a convent for the nobility and arrange a large dot for her—and for me?—I shall gamble in a controlled way at Monte Carlo——"

"You won't marry then, Suzette?"

"Marry!" she laughed a shrill laugh—"for why, Nicholas?—A tie-up to one man, bien?—to what good?—and yet who can say—to be an honored wife is the one experience I do not know yet!"—she laughed again.

"And who is Georgine—you have not spoken of her before, Suzette?"

She reddened a bit under her new terra cotta rouge.

"No?—Oh! Georgine is my little first mistake—but I have her beautifully brought up, Nicholas—with the Holy Mother at St. Brieux. I am then her aunt—so to speak—the wife of small shopkeeper in Paris, you must know. She adores me—and I give all I can to St. Georges des Pres—. Georgine will be a lady and marry the mayor's son—one day——"

Something touched me infinitely. This queer little demi-mondaine mother — her thoughts set on her child's purity and the conventional marriage for her — in the future. Her plebeian, insolent little round face so kindly in repose.

I respect Suzette far more than my friends of the world —.

"For the education of Georgine—Suzette."

She flung her arms around my neck and kissed me frankly on both cheeks, and tears were brimming over in her merry black eyes.

"Thou hast after all a heart, and art after all a gentleman Nicholas — Va!" — and she ran from the room.

For two days after I last wrote I tried not to see Miss Sharp—I gave short moments to my book—and she answered a number of business letters. She knows most of my affairs now—Burton transmits all the bills and papers to her—I can hear them talking through the thin door. The excitement of that time I was so rude seems to have used up my vitality, an utter weariness is upon me. I have hardly stirred from my chair.

The ancient guardsman, George Harcourt, came to lunch yesterday. He was as cynically whimsical as ever. He has a new love—an Italian—and until now she has refused all his offers of presents, so he is taking a tremendous interest in her.

"In what an incredible way the minds of women work, Nicholas," he said. "They have frequently a very definite aim underneath, but they 'grasshopper'—."

I looked puzzled I suppose.

"'To grasshopper' is a new verb!" he announced — "Daisy Ryven coined it. It means just as you alight upon a subject and begin tackling it, you spring to another one. These lovely American war workers 'grasshopper' continuously. It is impossible to keep pace with them."

I laughed.

"Yet they seem to have quite a definite aim — to get pleasure out of life."

"To 'grasshopper' does not prevent pleasure to the grasshopper. —It is only fatiguing to the listener. You can have no continued sensible conversation with any of these women — they force you to enjoy only their skins—"

"Can the Contessa talk?"

"She has the language of the South — She does not jump from one subject to another, she is frankly only interested in love."

"Honestly, George — do you believe there is such a thing as real love?"

"We have discussed this before, Nicholas — You know my views—but I am hoping Violetta will change them. She has just begun to ask daily if I love her."

"Why do women always do that—even one's little friends continually murmur the question?"

"It is the working of their subconscious minds—Damn good cigars these, my boy—pre-war eh?

Yes it is to [illegible] their [illegible]. They want to be assured in words that you adore them—because you see the actions of love really prove nothing of love itself. A stranger who has happened to appeal to the senses can call them forth quite as successfully as the lady of one's heart."

"It is logical of women then to ask that eternal question?"

"Quite— I make a point of answering them always without irritation."

——I wonder— if Miss Sharp loved any one would she?—but I am determined not to speculate further about her—

When Colonel Harcourt had gone I deliberately rang my bell and when she came into the room I found I was not sure what I had rung for. It is the most exasperating fact that Miss Sharp keeps me in a continual state of nervous consciousness.

Her manner was indifferently expectant, if one can use such a paradoxical description——.

"I—I—wondered if you played the piano?" I blurted out.

She looked surprised—if one can ever say she looks anything, with the expression of her eyes completely hidden. She answered as usual with one word——.

"Yes."

"I suppose you would not play to me?—er—it might give me an inspiration for the last chapter—"

She went and opened the lid of the instrument.

"What sort of music do you like?" she asked.

Desert Love

by Joan Conquest

WELL I remember when yon Tim of mine was down 't mine in t' big explosion—I took on just as ye are takin' on, love, but down in me heart, lass, I never really feared me, because I knew that me love for me lad was that great, lass, that I'd pull him out of danger—and sure and I did, lass, black as a sweep and with a broken arm, but alive, and a champion tea of shrimps and cress we had, jest as ye'll have with ye lad when he comes back, lass!"

THE STORY SO FAR

Jill Carden, a beautiful and daring young English girl, brought up in a conventional home, burns her bridges behind her and lives in an oasis, far from her own race, for the love of an Arab chief. After getting a position as traveling companion she finds herself at Suez. She gets her first glimpse of Hahmed, the Camel king, and tosses a coin to decide whether she shall speak to him or go back to England. It falls heads and she is committed to the Sheik in the desert. He takes her to Arabia, where he builds a beautiful home for her. She falls in love with him, and they journey to Cairo and are married.

Which motherly comfort served to lighten the heavy heart, but brought not the faintest shadow of a smile to the steadfast eyes. For even the vision of watercress, shrimps and tea on the verandah at Shepard's will not force a light to the windows of the soul when they are blinded with anxiety.

So Mary Bingham, in her cool white dress, lay back in the long chair with a glass of iced lemonade on a table by her side in a room darkened so as to induce slumber, whilst out in the desert echoed cries of "Good dog! At it! Good dog!" a man began scratching the sand as a ratting terrier does the earth, until he had excavated a hole big enough in which to curl himself, where he lay until desert things that creep and crawl drove him out again shrieking for water.

And the full force of the storm crashed about Jill's defenceless head at the midday hour also of the same day, when she ought to have been searching the coolness of her midday sleeping chamber, and forgetfulness of the last few hours in sleep.

Not quite defenceless was she, however, as she sat back in the chair, her eyes ablaze and her veil torn to shreds at her feet, ripping the moral atmosphere with words which seemed to have been dipped in some corrosive verbal fluid. She was angry, hurt, and deathly tired, and was doing her best to pass some of her mental suffering anyway on to the man who leant with folded arms against the cedar wall.

The inevitable crisis had come! The independence of Western womanhood had clashed with the Eastern ideas on the privacy and seclusion of the gentler sex. Jill simply could not understand that there was any cause for the terrible jealousy which had suddenly blazed up in the Arab when she had innocently repeated her request to be allowed to see her old friend. Hahmed was as incapable of understanding the request, having failed in his sojourn in the West to fully realize the everyday kind of jolly, good, frank camaraderie which can exist between certain types of English man and woman.

Half a word of tenderness, half a gesture of love, and she would have been sobbing or laughing happily in his arms, but like a prairie fire before the wind, the terrible Eastern rage was blazing through the man, too fierce, too terrific to allow him to analyze the situation, or remember that the upbringing of his girl-wife had been totally different to that of the women of his country.

Jill suddenly sat forward, clasping one slim ankle across her knee in a slim hand, a position she knew perfectly well would arouse Hahmed to a frenzy, and spoke slowly and mockingly in English instead of the pretty lisping Arabic which always entranced him.

"You may lecture, and remonstrate, and admonish, which all comes to the same thing, until night falls, but you will never make me see eye to eye with you in this. It is simply absurd to threaten that you will shut me in my apartments until I learn reason. If you lock me in, or place guards about me, I will jump from the roof and gain my freedom by breaking my neck. Why Jack Weatherbourne—oh——"

Hahmed had leant forward, and had very suddenly, and not over gently, jerked her to her feet, holding her by the strength of his hands alone, as she desperately tried to liberate herself.

"Let me go, Hahmed! Let me go! You are hurting me dreadfully. You must not hurt me—you must not bruise me. Oh! you don't understand!"

She struggled furiously and unavailingly, resorting at last to cruelty to gain her end.

"Let me go, Hahmed! Take your hands away—I—I hate to feel them upon me!"

He let her go, pushing her away from him ever so slightly, so that she stumbled against the chair, cracking her ankle-bone, that tenderest bit of anatomical scaffolding, against a projecting piece of ornamental wood.

It was a case of injury added to insult, and she crouched back furious in her physical hurt as she tore the silken covering from her arms, where already showed faint bruises above the little tattoo mark showing itself so black against the white skin, and upon which she put her finger.

"Oh! who would have thought when you tattooed that, Jack—!"

But she stood her ground and shrugged her naked shoulders irritatingly when Hahmed crossed the dividing space in a bound with his hand upon the hilt of his dagger.

"Bi—smi—llah! what sayest thou? This mark upon the fairness of thy arm which I have thought a blemish, and therefore have not questioned thee thereon—sayest thou it is a dakkh, what thou callest a tattoo mark? And if so what has it to do with the man whose name is unceasingly upon thy lips?"

Jill stood like a statue of disdain.

"What is the mater now, Hahmed? Please understand that I will not tolerate such continual fault finding any longer! That is a tattoo mark of a pail of water—you may not know that we have a rhyme in England which begins like this:

"Jack and Jill went up a hill
To fetch a pail of water"

Oh! shades of ancient Egypt, did you ever hear or see anything so pathetically absurd as Jill as she solemnly repeated the old doggerel!

"That makes no difference—a pail of water or the outline of a flower—did this man—this—this Jack make the mark upon thee?"

Jill hesitated for a second and then answered with a glint in her eye.

"Yes! he did—and he did Mary too—put the dinkiest little heart on her arm—we were under the cherry tree in the vegetable——!"

"Go!" suddenly thundered the Arab.

And Jill, gathering her raiment about her for departure, turned to look straight into the man's eyes, whilst her heart, in spite of the little scornful smile which twisted the corner of her mouth, leapt with the love which had blossomed a hundred fold under the torrent of jealousy, wrath, and mastery which he had poured forth upon her during the last hour.

"Behold! art thou weak," she said sweetly in his own tongue, "having not the strength to kill that which offends thee. 'Thou shalt not know this man, or any other man,'" she mocked, quoting his words, "and yet canst thou not break me to thy will! Of a truth, I have no further use for thee in thy weakness!"

But Hahmed's control had only been slightly cracked so that he merely pointed to the curtain which divided Jill's quarters from the rest of the house.

"Go!" he said simply, "go to thy apartment, wherein thou shalt stay until thou seest good to come to me in obedience and love. Thou shalt not go forth except to the gardens, neither shall thy friends visit thee, neither shalt thou climb to the roof; and thou shalt obey me—many, aye, many a woman were dead for far less than this thy disobedience—but thou—thou art too beautiful to kill, except with love—go!"

And Jill went, with beautiful head held high, heart throbbing from love, and blood pounding in her ears from downright rage.

"I will not obey you! I shall do exactly as I wish!" she proclaimed, with the curtain in her hand. In which she was mistaken, for the simple fact that love held her fast.

And the curtain swinging to hide her from the Arab, as she stood for one moment holding out her arms toward him; and for the same reason she did not see him pick up her torn, scented veil, to thrust it betwen his inner silken vest and his sorely perturbed heart.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—By ANN LISLE

"OF course," said Mr. Lacy, quietly after an instant. "We'll run right along and meet Park. And—Mrs. Harrison—don't think me intrusive or impudent for adding this. But if circumstances compel you to have your dinner with this old friend of your — family, don't imagine I'll be fool enough to take offence or feel miffed or anything like that. I hope I'm not talking like a fresh—country bumpkin."

"YOU'RE TALKING LIKE A DEAR," ANNOUNCED MISS MAY

"You're talking like a dear," announced Miss May with astonishing assurance. "Mrs. Harrison understands perfectly that you're releasing her without the slightest thought of misunderstanding. And I don't see why we should risk her not having dinner at all for fear of hurting our feelings. So it's just as well to have everything settled before we go."

"Nice people!" I cried. "I might have been silly enough to starve to death if you hadn't given me permission to have a sandwich and glass of milk with Tom Mason."

My bantering tone sent them off satisfied. But I couldn't help feeling worried. Tom's tone had carried some hint of agitation. Nervously going over the possibilities of the situation, I paced up and down the office waiting for him. Finally he burst into the office looking so agitated that I could scarcely believe this was the suave and inperturbable Tom Mason. Without a preliminary word of greeting he demanded:

"Where's Daisy? Have you any idea?"

"Daisy!" I reapted stupidly. "What's the matter with her?"

"I don't know," replied Tom grimly. "That's what I'm asking you—where's Daisy? Don't stand staring at me as if you think me crazy. Tell me what you know about the—poor kid."

"Why, Tom," I answered slowly, "you're sweeping me from my bearings. You sound so—mysterious. I thought you'd know where she was. They thought so at the office——"

"So you did miss her!" cried Tom in a tone I couldn't fathom. "She didn't slip out—unnoticed. The poor little thing isn't friendless."

"Of course not," I said. "You couldn't think that. I tried to locate her almost a week ago and they seemed to think down at your office that you'd sent her instructions to go off on a buying trip. Evidently you didn't. That leaves us ready to start off from the beginning if we're going to figure—"

"When did you see her last?" interrupted Tom.

"About two weeks ago, I suppose. I'm not so sure of that, as I am of the first time I missed her," I answered, interesting myself to ask. "But why are we standing here staring at each other like two wild people? There's nothing the matter. Why should we act as if there were?"

"Let's not bluff ourselves or each other," replied Tom curtly. "This is ugly. The studio is locked and silent. They don't know a thing about her at her boarding place. Mrs. Hill is in the dark. The poor kiddie hasn't any friends. At least none that I know of. There isn't any place to turn or anything to do but inform the police."

"Oh, Tom, I wouldn't do that!" I cried. "Betty Brice was out of reach once for a while, and it wasn't anything."

Even as it slipped out I was conscious that I had given Betty the name that was hers before her marriage to poor Terry.

"Betty had friends, money, position—things to live for," Tom cut in grimly. "This poor child has nothing, less than nothing, excepting her position in my studio. She didn't go off and leave that—idly. There's a motive back of it—or a danger. And two weeks is a long time. Anything can happen in that length of time. I blame myself—and bitterly. It's all my fault."

"Partly mine," I urged. "I should never have let you go off on this quest for me. What makes it all the worse is that it looks as if Dick West has slunk back to town. I shouldn't have let you go."

"Mary" ROMANCE OF A BOSTON BUSINESS GIRL

By Elenore Meherin

Start This Story Today

MARY KELLY wins the post of private secretary to HALL DAWSON, a dynamic promoter with offices in Water street. She instinctively fears him. After the conclusion of a big deal he calls her his mascot and gives her a check for $100, which she accepts with misgivings. Reassured by Dawson, however, she plunges into her work, dreaming of the day she will be his partner. Mary goes to see the parade of the returning Yankee Division and meets PAT SULLIVAN, her childhood sweetheart. JACK MAHONEY, a young millionaire, declares his love for her. Pat takes Mary riding and she realizes she loves him only. She receives a letter of proposal from Mahoney and answers it with a refusal. Pat has a row with Dawson. Mary sits for her portrait to Allan Bruce. Dawson insults her at his house and Mrs. Dawson orders her out.

"I'LL come again in the morning," I told the clerk.

"Yes, there'll be better luck tomorrow. We never have two dull days."

I ran in a frenzy to get home—to read the letters. Perhaps he had written; perhaps he had not gone.

Ma had put them on my bureau. She was out shopping when I came in.

One was from Jack. He was in New York. Every week he sent me books, music, odd curios; the other was from him. I put it in the box with all the others from him.

Even the writing of the two letters was so different; Jack's fine, spidery, fantastic looking; Pat's strong, back handed, impulsive.

Scarcely able to breathe, I opened it.

"Dear Mary: You may not want to hear from me, but I cannot go without writing this; without begging you to believe that it is not madness nor jealousy, but only the love of you, that prompts it. Mary, you are more than life to me—dearer than pride or happiness. I try to keep cool now as I write, but when I see what you are stepping into it drives me wild. You cannot know—you cannot see it as I do. Mary, give up working for him. You will have to some day. It will be more terrible then. Give it up now before it is too late.

"What can you see in him, Mary? Oh, God! I wish that I was blind. I would give the heart out of my body to wipe out that frightful scene. Mary, you were to me all that was sweet and beautiful in life. I never looked into your glorious eyes without wishing to be better; a sense of humility, or adoration—you were a shrine to me.

"If I had not seen it, Mary, no power on earth could force me to believe it. You were standing at the window of his home, his arms around you, his head bending down, laughing, close to yours. And you stood there, Mary, looking at the very scene we had seen an hour before—your lips yet warm with the love you said was mine.

"You sat down. The chair had its back to me. I couldn't see you, but I saw him leaning forward. He must have been holding your hands, and then you were in his arms, your head against him, bent down. . . .

"I would die before I would go through that anguish again. I rode away. I was finished. I never wanted to see you. I don't know how far I rode, then I went crazy. I came back. I was going to break into the place, to drag you away whether you wanted to stay or not. I wanted to do something violent—to hurt you.

"I rang the bell. As the door opened his wife was going up the stairs. She stopped when she heard me ask for you.

"That's what she said to me. I thought I had missed you. I went to the car. You couldn't have reached it in that moment. You weren't there. I rode up and down the block and then I went back and waited in front of that house.

"I don't know why I waited; I wanted to talk, to hear what you would say, to demand what you meant. I don't know what I did want.

"Then I knew you must have gone. You would have to take the car, so I waited there, and all I wanted then was to see you; to know that you were no longer with him. I wanted to hear you, but as soon as you started to talk the frightful thing flashed before me—I couldn't, didn't intend to speak to you. But something drew me to you. I listen.

"I don't know how you could do it, Mary. How could you stand there and tell me you loved me and let me put my arms around you and then go out to him——

"If I had spoken more—if I had bound you to me, would you have done it, too? The night I saw Allan Bruce kiss you I thought my heart would break. I wanted to tell you then, to beg you to wait for me, but I had nothing to offer, and you knew what I thought. I sent you the ring. It said everything.

"That night (do you remember, Mary?) I said it was a shabby thing, and you asked me if I were never shabby. Not since I knew that I loved you, Mary. From the moment I could fight against it no longer I had no thought but for you. Everywhere I looked I saw your beloved eyes; I heard your voice, that is the sweetest sound in the world.

"You were before me always. I saw you in a big apron like the night I came early and you made me wash the dishes. God, Mary—if you knew the joy of that night. It seemed a miracle to me the way you dried a cup—the way you stacked the dishes.

"Mary, I would do anything in the world for you. I would give my life to make you happy. When you stood against the car last night and cried I wanted to die. I didn't know that any one could suffer so and live.

"If you stay on working for him—you will cry often, oh, darling—I am not blaming you. Dawson came to me. He was furious when he knew I was going to sell the carburetor.

"Mary, you were the glory I dreamed of. Now it is over and the beauty gone from life. I wish I could put you from my thoughts the way you shoved me aside.

"Now it is over. But I love you. I will keep on loving you always."

Scarcely able to breathe, I opened it

I read it again and again. There was an anguish that was joy to me in the abandon of his admission. As much more than he was to me I was to him. His heart was mine, his thoughts. He would give me his life. Never had he said so much. Never had he satisfied the yearning I had to hear. Now his voice throbbed in the vivid words. The paper quivered with a living pain. It was his soul. He loved me.

He was gone. He had led me into the hall and closed the door after him. But I went with him. The knowledge sent a warm, melting sadness over the cold, dumb apathy that held me. He could not put me from him. We had a common pain—the torment of memory.

And I was glad for that—glad for his suffering. It was a bond between us.

That bond was a holy thing. No matter where he traveled, he would see me standing at the desk in the office telling him I loved him. He would never be free.

Suddenly a stab of pain, sharp, arousing, went through me. There was no beauty in that bond for him—nothing but sorrow and disillusion. He would not see me in the office, but spent in the studio while Allan Bruce kissed me, indifferent at the window as Dawson put his arms around me.

I folded my arms on the chair, fighting against the tides of despair that rose and bore down the momentary exaltation.

For the first time I saw myself as Pat saw me; saw what he thought—the cheapness, the deceit, the shabbiness. What answer could I make?

I had stood there at Dawson's window, heedless of his arm on my shoulder, his laughing face bent close to mine. I had thought no more of it than of a hundred similar incidents. But for Pat—I was branded. Half an hour later Dawson had gripped me in his arms. I was guilty. Nothing would ever wipe that shameful memory from Pat's mind.

I had stood for an ideal. Its beauty was gone. He might love me. He didn't want me. I had broken his dream.

I sat there waiting while wave after wave of misery and anguish rolled over me. And now all these admissions that a moment before had gladdened, uplifted me, were like a dirge intensifying the melancholy, insistent boom of those remorseless waves.

It was over. He didn't want me. He spoke of his love only to mourn it.

I stopped in the alley to powder my nose [illegible]. "Sit down right away, Mary." Ma was bringing in a dish of stew and [illegible]. "Your father has good news. Daniels will start building in a week, two weeks at most, and Robert will be [illegible]."

June looked at me and smiled, her eyes [illegible]. Only the sudden disappearance of "tomorrow" as a human institution would ever rob ma of hope.

"I'm not going to get married," June said suddenly, "till dad gets a job. I couldn't rest worrying over ma."

"What's the matter with me?—the nerve of you!" I fired.

"You haven't any contract." She looked at me sharply. "Suppose you were canned? It's not impossible."

"It's not very likely," I answered.

Saturday was a poor day at the Typewriter Companies. There were three calls for sub clerks and two for first-class stenographers at a salary of $100.

By 5 o'clock I was ready to take any offer that was made.

"Wait a few days; it will pay you in the long run." The woman in charge was very friendly. I think she understood the panic that gripped me.

I don't know how I went through Sunday and Monday. I was afraid to walk around town. June might meet me. I answered four calls and the highest salary was $100 a month.

"I wouldn't take it," the clerk advised. "Let it go until tomorrow. You can always get a chance at $100. I know a man who wants a private secretary. I'll speak for you."

So I went home to another evening of pretense, of gayety, of [illegible]. My check from Dawson should be there. I looked on the hatrack—on the bureau.

"Weren't there any letters, ma?"

"Not one, dear."

A cold fury of anger, of indignation [illegible]. I would go to his office and demand [illegible]. I would [illegible] give me the [illegible]. The fear of [illegible] suddenly became an intense desire to confront him—to fight him. Was [illegible] to save [illegible]? He was [illegible]. I would go to his office the first thing in the morning.

I was filled with a hatred for him [illegible]. And in [illegible] I sat down for the tenth time to answer Pat's letter. He had given me no address; he didn't want to hear from me. I didn't care. I had no pride. I would write, anyway, mailing it in care of the Accessory Company. The other letters had been weak, fervid, always pouring out devotion, justifications, begging him to believe. I had flung myself at [illegible]. I tore them all up. Now I wrote one that was angry, resentful, accusing . . . as if I had looked again at his, I tore it up, too. I would never write to him.

"Mary! You're not doing anything," June called. "Go get us some brown sugar, please. [illegible] making a fire in the dining room. We're going to make panoche."

It was just after dinner. I was glad of an excuse to be out. The grocery was down the block and around the corner. Just as I got to the street an automobile ran in front of me, coming to an abrupt halt. I jumped to the sidewalk. The driver got out, walked swiftly and blocked my path. I was too frightened to move. The man raised his hat. I looked up.

It was Hall Dawson.

"Mary! Wait a minute. here's your check!"

TEACH CHILD TO PLAY

—By Wm. A. McKeever—

TEACH your child to play. Do not expect him to find out all he should know about a game merely by trial and correction. The accumulation of the world's knowledge comes through the heritage of one generation being passed on to the next.

Turn a thousand of our smart children out in the wilds to shift for themselves and without any use of the accumulated learning of the past, and they would grow up as savages.

Life is too short for us to learn everything by experimentation. We should never catch up by such methods. Wherefore, show your little ones how to hold his toy hammer or his baby hoe and how to make the stroke. Go through the movements with him till he gets them.

Many people go through life doing simple things backward and wrong merely from a bad and bunglesome practise in learning the first stroke. There are many women who wear themselves out before the noon hour arrives through false and wasteful efforts in performing the common routine work.

There are men who fall behind and who lose out in business for want of an economical method of attending to the simplest rudiments.

Every lesson of play which you teach a child will prove to be a very special matter. After he has learned well how to spin a top, for example, he will be able to apply a little of that knowledge to the playing of croquet.

Children who are left merely to stumble upon the practice often play ineffectually just as they work ineffectually until shown how to do better.

Insist on your boy's making a good kite, if he does make any at all. Study the parts and connections with him. Take time to show him the true stroke in swimming, how to start and to make speed in running, how to swing the oar in rowing. Teach your girl how to dress her doll, how to thread her needle, how to hold her tiny brush in painting pictures, and the like.

Teach your child a variety of play. He should know a considerable list of games to play as an individual, "solitaire" games. And then, he should know how to play all the standard group games. Do not become misled with the idea that through play practice your child is merely getting fun and entertainment. That cheapens and belittles this important matter.

His play is the major part of his education, for the time being. Out of it he is acquiring the elements of skill, of agility and of self-control, which later can be wrought into the more serious affairs of life, and greatly to his profit.

But the biggest meaning of play is yet to be stated. It is rare experience, social insight and human sympathy derived from practice of what the masses have been doing throughout past generations, and are doing now.

A Neat Excuse.

Wife—"Today is my birthday and you've come home and forgotten to bring me a present."

Husband—"But, dearie, how can I remember? You look as young as you did last year."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

By B. C. FORBES.

New York, Sept. 20.—Don't jump to the conclusion that another World War is about to engulf mankind.

One man's guess is probably as good as another's. My guess is that the Turks, notwithstanding all their blood-thirstiness and fanaticism, will very shortly be brought to their senses.

Monday's [illegible] news sent wheat up five cents a bushel and lots of stocks down several dollars a share.

Wall Street and the Chicago wheat pit saw red. They acted on the assumption that another world war was [illegible]. A lot of people talked and wrote as if Armageddon had again broke loose.

Yesterday stocks and grain markets were not so excited. They were less sure that Russia would send overwhelming armies to fight side by side with the Turks to drive British, French and other interests off that part of the European map invaded by the impossible and unspeakable Truk.

Undeniably, very far reaching possibilities are involved. Religion enters into this conflict and religion is still capable of lashing Asiatics into unbridled fury.

Britain must think of her many millions of subjects in India, who are in hearty sympathy with the Turks' anti-Christian activities and aspirations.

Oracular threats of unleashing a holy war" are being made. But after the events of the World War such threats have lost much of their terror. It used to be imagined that somehow or other the rest of the human race could be and would be wiped off the face of the earth were a "holy war" declared. We now know better.

The Turks, by their latest demonstrations of inhuman cruelty, have perhaps gained certain immediate military advantages; but they have alienated afresh any sympathy and any faith more civilized tactics might have tended to inspire. But, by so doing, the Turks are simply running true to form. Their presence as an influence and a power on the continent of Europe is unthinkable and impossible at his stage of the world's civilization.

One of two things may be expected to happen.

Either peace will be arranged rather promptly, by negotiation; or

Britain will head so swift and effective hostilities that the crisis is likely to be overcome in short order.

The Russian Soviets, if they are wise will reason that they have troubles enough at home without venturing to incur avoidable expenditures of money and man power even in an attempt to wreak revenge upon hated capitalistic nations.

In this connection, neither the Soviets nor the Turkish leaders will fail to note that the State Department at Washington has instructed the American high commissioner at Constantinople to gather and forward detailed information concerning the destruction of American lives and American property in Smyrna through the savage conduct of the Turks.

There would seem to be considerable room for establishing peace by negotiation. Certain high authorities contend that the Allies went too far in the direction of subjugating and humiliating the Turks following Turkey's defeat in the World War. The regime established in Constantinople, for example, does not strike one as altogether tenable. And Constantinople apparently comes very near being the hub of the whole matter. Here there should be opportunity for a compromise not utterly galling to Turkey and yet not fatal to insuring the freedom of commerce and shipping in that crucial part of the world.

Nothing is so likely, however, to bring the Turks to a reasonable frame of mind as an overwhelming demonstration of naval and military force such as Britain is now aggressively preparing to launch with or without the wholehearted support of the other allies. Turkey—nor for that matter, Russia—has not unlimited power left after the crippling events of 1914-1918.

True, the people of Britain and France and Italy and Greece have also had all the war they want for many years to come. Yet the attitude promptly displayed by people of Britain and her dominions shows that they have no intention of permitting the Turks to run amuck and plunder and massacre and invade to their hearts content.

A single match can light a huge conflagration. But materials for fresh huge conflagrations at this time have been pretty well used

ZINC AT HIGHEST PRICE IN 2 YEARS

The price of zinc has advanced to [illegible] 7.05 cents per pound. This is the fifth advance in about three weeks and brings the metal to the highest price at which it has sold in over two years. Zinc touched 4.25 cents late in 1921.

PROFESSIONALS IN CONTROL AT CLOSE

The vetoing of the soldier bonus bill by President Harding furnished the impetus for a sharp upturn at the outset on the New York Stock Exchange. The rally, which lasted until about midday, carried prices on the most active stocks up anywhere from one to four points. The rest of the session prices moved within narrow limits and at the close the market was highly irregular.

Professional traders seemed to be in control of prices in the last half of the session. They swayed securities at will. In numerous instances early advances were completely wiped out.

Reports of an early reopening of the Ford plant's, excellent progress being made by the coal and the railroad companies in bringing fuel to industrial plants, settlement of the shopmen's strike on the New York Central and announcement of higher prices for various commodities all contributed to the more cheerful sentiment.

Oils continued the bulk of dealings in the early stages of the market. The advances in this section were sharp. Standard Oil issues, Mexican Petroleum, Barnsdall A and Royal Dutch all rose briskly. These gains, however, were clipped when the market turned irregular.

New high prices for the year were reached by Chile Copper, American Zinc preferred, Utah Securities, Adams Express, Beechnut, Orpheum Circuit, Lake Erie & Western, Austin Nichols, Tide Water Oil, Moon Motors and Consolidated Cigar.

Coppers, zincs, equipments, motors, public utilities and independent steels participitated in the upturn. the improvement in prices extended from good sized fractions to nearly two points. Trading in the rails was less active.

Bears directed their late attacks on shipping shares and the U. S. Rubber offerings. Rubber common went as low as 51½ where the quotation was just a small fraction above the 1922 low. The preferred stock also broke sharply. Marine preferred was the principal target in the shipping group.

Wall St. Gossip

PRINCE & WHITELY—High grade rails still offer best opportunities for speculative operations, when element of safety is considered.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—The technical position of the market has been strengthened by the combination of liquidation and short selling which has taken place since last Friday.

F. B. KEECH & CO.—We look for funrther irregularity in the market, but would hold securities of recognized value and buy on any further material recessions.

JOSEPHTHAL & CO.—We believe a favorable opportunity is presented right here to purchase the coppers.

W. J. WOLLMAN & CO.—Strength in foreign exchange clearly shows that the Turkish question is out of the way as a market factor. Oils, steels, coppers and equipments should be purchased for higher prices.

LIVINGSTON & CO.—The rally should continue somewhat further, but the list as a whole has given definite indication of a lower trend. Rallies should be used to sell stocks.

GOODBODY & CO.—Vetoing of bonus bill and passing of tariff bill by Senate are at least temporarily favorable factors. Believe market will be irregular, with professionals trying to force market down. We will be surprised if they are successful. Still bullish on public utilities.

INVINCIBLE'S advance is due to the fact that an 8,000 to 10,000-barrel well has been brought in in Webster Parish in Louisiana by the Pine Woods Oil Co., which is reported to be the proving up of the largest pool yet discovered in Louisiana.

NORTHERN PACIFIC is now handling largest freight business since 1917. Gross earnings are showing substantial increases because of reductions in rates on lumber and grain.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD, catering as it does to the greatest steel producers and the largest coal mining district in the country, bids fair to show at least 8 per cent. earned on its stock this year.

AMERICAN SMELTING advanced the price of lead from 6 to 6.10c per pound.

PACKARD MOTOR for year ended should show net profits, after charges and taxes, in excess of $1,000,000, or just about dividend requirements of $1,035,286 on $14,789,800 7 per cent. preferred stock.

HUDSON MOTORS net for the nine months ended September 1 should be close to $6,000,000 or $5 a share.

McCRORY STORES reports sales for August of $1,368,761 against $1,121,940 in August last year, increase 22 per cent. For the eight months sales were $9,749,148 against $8,250,085 last year, increase 18.02 per cent.

Cotton Market

Cotton was steady in New York: October, 21⅜, up four, December, 21.55 up 6, January, 21.40, up 8, March, 21.46, up 9; May, 21.40, up 10.

COSDEN WILL OFFER NEW STOCK

Cosden & Co. directors authorized offering of an additional 187,000 shares no par common stock. This stock is to be offered to common and preferred stockholders at $41 a share, equal to 17 per cent. of present holdings.

From proceeds of the sale of additional stock, the company will call in and retire on January 1 at 110 and accrued interest $5,785,500 6 per cent. convertible bonds now outstanding.

Regarding this section, the directors stated "by redemption of these bonds, eliminating entire bonded indebtedness, financial structure of company will be materially strengthened. There will be eliminated an annual average charge against earnings, for interest and sinking fund requirements, of approximately $1,550,000. This will increase earnings available for distribution to stockholders, and, in view of this the directors decided to increase the dividend to $1 quarterly on common stock."

"Combined net earnings for the company and its subsidiaries for six months ended June 30, 1922, were over $6,750,000, before deducting depreciation, depletion and interest of about $280,000 on bonds to be redeemed."

"Since its organization in 1917 the company has retired $5,740,000 of $11,423,500 of bonded debt then outstanding.

"As of June 30 the company had current assets of $14,671,793, of which $3,931,217 was cash, and current liabilities of $6,331,066, leaving working capital of $8,340,727."

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—Another reaction before tomorrow's close following the completion of this first rally against shorts. Once the short interest is eliminated and the support stock is sold to them, insiders will have little desire to keep the rally going and we may expect another reaction. Because such a reaction is likely at any moment, we think it will not pay to abandon caution and conclude that Monday's break was an accident and that all one now needs is courage and a stout margin in order to make profits.

WALDORF SYSTEM, INC., opened its hundreth store at No. 225 Tremont street.

MUTUAL OIL stockholders ratified increase in authorized capital stock from 3,000,000 to 6,000,000 shares par value $5.

Equipment Firms Now Rushed With Orders

As a result of the numerous orders placed for railway freight cars and locomotives during the last few months, in addition to those placed earlier in the year, the equipment companies, according to railroad officials, are so crowded with orders that they are reluctant to take on new contracts pending the delivery of a majority of those already on the books.

Orders placed for both cars and locomotives are still below those of normal years.

Prima Radio Corporation manufactured the majority of the parts for the 3,500 drop annunciators installed in the New York Stock Exchange, according to a statement by William [illegible], president of the corporation. The corporation also made the 1,200 switch boxes installed in the Stock Exchange, this device having been perfected by [illegible] Klumpp, an inventor who is secretary and treasurer of the Prima Radio Corp.

Replies to Investors

Queries of interest to investors will be answered in this column or by mail. Address questions, with stamped and self-addressed envelope, to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

His First Experience. To C. H. T., Melrose—You have enough Swift, and you should learn right at the start not to put all your money in a single security or in a single industry. You can buy Cudahy Packing 5s, 1946, to yield 5.75 per cent., but you should put only $1,000 into that bond. Then buy $1,000 each of Denver Gas & Electric 5s, 1951, yielding 5.70 per cent., and Public Service of Northern Illinois 5s, 1956, yielding 5.55 per cent.

Willys-Overland. To V. W. M., Columbus avenue—You put a pretty big burden on our shoulders when you ask us to assume the responsibility of telling you whether to dispose of Willys-Overland preferred. Instead of telling you what you should do we will tell you what we should do. Willys-Overland is not "going to the dogs," though a good many people thought it would. We believe that the company is going to come out of its difficulties, and if we owned this stock we would hang on to it a little while longer.

Lehigh Valley. To A. L., Whitman—Lehigh Valley is speculative in a certain sense. The road earned over 16 per cent. on its $50 par value stock last year and opened this year with quite an improvement. The stock yields about 5 per cent. now. We do not pretend to know what will be its market action. Other shares which sell under or around $50 a share are Texas Company, Pennsylvania Railroad, and North American preferred.

This is the first time New England has had the presidency. Mr. Whitney is chairman of the board of control of the Men's Apparel Show, to be held in Mechanics Building next week.

CONDITIONS AT DAVIS-DALY IMPROVE

C. G. Schirmer, treasurer of the Davis-Daly Copper Co., accompanied by the president, H. M. Burton, have just returned from their annual visit to the property.

Mr. Schirmer says conditions at the property never looked better than they do today, notwithstanding the drop in the price of the stock during his absence.

Treasurer Schirmer says:

"The property is in a better physical condition than at any time in the history of the company. Ores are being developed at a greater rate of speed than extraction and shipments are aggregating upwards of 500 tons per day on one shift. Equipment at the mine is now sufficient to hoist upwards of 700 tons per day and arrangements are being made with the smelter to increase their capacity to accommodate the additional tonnage.

"Officials of the company are highly pleased with the physical and surface conditions of the property. The equipment and efficiency at the mine are at a very high standard."

have always exercised a large influence over the Financial Markets. This is often manifested not only in the fluctuations of individual issues but in at least the minor movements of the general list.

If a big man dies, or if it becomes known that he will go to Europe, there is frequently an immediate reflection in quotations, and someone has said, "If you would know markets, know the men who make them."

The outstanding feature of our weekly market news service just now is a series of intimate, human interest articles on sketching the careers of such men as James R. Keene, Jay Gould and others of heavy caliber in Stock Market battlings.

A study of these articles may be as profitable as any "news," in attempting to analyze the underlying reasons for market happenings—although Redmond's Financial Weekly, in which "STOCK MARKET OPERATORS" is appearing, also contains a broad selection of the latest more significant "NEWS" on active issues.

WALDORF LUNCH OPENS 100TH STORE TODAY

A Boston business passed the century mark when the Waldorf System opened its hundredth store today at No. 225 Tremont street. The store is a testimonial to the rapid advances that have been made in the important art of feeding people quickly.

Behind the scenes, where the food is prepared, there is no color—nothing but the dazzling white of glazed tile and glistening nickel—no nooks and crannies to collect dirt—no parts that cannot be washed. All is metal and tile.

EFFICIENCY KEYNOTE.

Efficiency is the keynote. In a little kitchen about eight by fifteen feet one man can cook the rush of short orders without having to turn away from the stove—everything is before him where he can reach it without taking a step. The dishes must be served piping hot, and this necessitates a complicated, compact system of heating devices and steam tables, which keep the food at just the right temperature.

Down in the basement an automatic refrigerating plant pumps its cold through frost-covered pipes to the ice chest, the water coolers, the fruit and salad trays on the front counter.

DISHES STERILIZED.

Close by are the boilers to supply hot water to sterilize the dishes. The new Waldorf represents the best of all that is right in restaurant design and is the work of the Waldorf System's own architect, Mr. John M. Gray. It is complete from the snowy white of the patron's washroom to the ventilation, which leaves no trace of the odors of cooking and assures a constant supply of fresh air.

This newest Waldorf, at No. 225 Tremont street, is under the management of H. R. Murphy, whose long training in the organization assures faithful continuation of the Waldorf ideals—quality, courtesy and cleanliness.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

SIGNAL honor was paid to Jackie Coogan this week when a telegram from Judge Elbert H. Gary arrived at "the kid's" studios in Hollywood.

The telegram asked Jackie if he would not participate in the big Safety Campaign which Judge Gary is carrying on in New York city. Jackie was asked to come East and personally assist in this worthy cause.

A telegram was promptly dispatched to the Public Safety Committee in New York assuring them and Judge Gary of Jackie Coogan's fullest co-operation.

On the Safety Committee are some of the biggest names in the country. Among them are those of Dr. Royal S. Copeland, commissioner of health of New York; Dr. John Dewey, head of Department of Education of Columbia University; Marcus A. Dow, director of Safety of the New York Central Railroad; Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Julius Miller, president of the Borough of New York; John D. Rockefeller, Franklin D. Roosevelt, F. D. Underwood, president of the Erie Railroad; Hon. John F. Hylan, Mayor of New York, and dozens equally prominent.

STORY OF GOLD RUSH.

EMERSON HOUGH'S novel, "The Covered Wagon," the story of the gold rush of '49 across the Western prairies to California, is to be made into a Paramount picture. Jesse L. Lasky has secured the rights to the story and is making elaborate plans for its production by James Cruze, who has just finished "The Old Homestead."

One of the scenes of the picture will show 350 prairie wagons leaving Westport Landing, now Kansas City. Other scenes will show a big buffalo hunt, an attack by Indians and the frantic search for gold in the California of '49.

FILM IBANEZ'S LATEST.

COSMOPOLITAN Productions sent a specially selected company to Europe Saturday on the President Harding, to film Blasco Ibanez's story, "The Enemies of Women," amidst the scenes where the author located his latest, and as many consider his greatest romance. The members of the cast who sailed are Lionel Barrymore, who recently created the role of Blackie Dawson in Cosmopolitan's picturization of Jack Boyle's story, "The Face in the Fog," and who has cancelled his stage engagements for the present to remain with Cosmopolitan; Alma Rubens recently featured in the Cosmopolitan picturization of "The Valley of Silent Men," who will play the Russian princess; Pedro de Corboda, Gareth Hugues, W. H. Thompson, William Collier, Jr., and Gladys Hulette. Alan Crosland, who will direct the picture, also sailed.

NEW FACE, NEW SOUL

AMONG the marvels of this generation is plastic surgery by which science, the maimed faces of soldiers wounded in war are rebuilt. For the first time, this new science is used as a theme for a motion picture in Mr. Ince's unusual drama "Skin Deep." A notorious crook was redeemed by an operation which changed the face familiar to the police and the underworld and gave him a new one and a decent chance in life.

RINGLINGS' CIRCUS FILMED

SHIRLEY MASON'S next picture will be a circus story, as yet untitled, and directed by Rowland V. Lee. Many of the scenes will be shot under the big tops of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus, which shortly is to make a tour of the Pacific Coast. The script calls for some tense, nerve-racking sequences that will provide thrills aplenty. It will present a phase of circus life never before attempted on the screen—that is, they will be made providing the big lions, tigers and elephants can be induced to participate as planned and their trainers say it may be possible.

LARGE CROWD SEES "FIREWORKS CIRCUS"

Despite the cold and inclement weather, a good-sized crowd assembled at Braves Field to witness the "Fireworks Circus" put on by the American Fireworks Company. The show consisted of flaming representatives of objects usually seen at a circus, and was followed by a display of rockets and a bombardment. The affair will be repeated tonight for the last fireworks display of the season.

Drawing the Color Line at Winchester?

If it is true, as charged, that the town of Winchester is making an invidious distinction in the treatment of the white and colored school children, it will live to regret its mistake and will apologize for it during many years to come. Massachusetts is not the place and the year 1922 is not the time to begin making that kind of distinction north of the Mason and Dixon line.

We assume that if this distinction is being made the town has been advised as to the character of the distinction which is permissible under the Federal Constitution. Therefore, we assume that the colored children are receiving as good instruction and are being as well housed as the white children. So much the parents of the colored children can enforce in our courts.

But why make any distinction at all. If it is defensible under any circumstances it is defensible in the South, where the colored people exist in great numbers and where there is the possibility of physical amalgamation, which would change the physical character of our Southern citizens.

But in the North there is no such thing. The colored people are small in numbers and we have been accustomed to treating them as equals before the law, and making no public distinctions between them and the whites. Why humiliate them now? What worthy cause is served by so undemocratic a distinction? We freed the colored people by a great sacrifice of our blood and our treasure. They are a sturdy, law-abiding race, brought here by our own violence and lawlessness and inhumanity. Those who brought them here were not Southerners, but Northern ship owners, captains and sailors.

No social or economic or political benefit is truly served by these distinctions in the North. We hope that Winchester's example, if she has actually set such a bad example, will not be followed elsewhere in New England, and that if she persists in it the Legislature will correct it.

Treasonable Attack

We have been wondering how long the liberal element of this community, and especially our local labor leaders, are going to remain silent under the threat of the United States Attorney-General's injunction against the railroad men filed in Chicago the other day.

This is the most treasonable attack upon the constitutional liberties of all our people that we have seen in recent years. Certainly it is the most audacious and revolutionary and treasonable assault upon the fundamental rights of a free people which has occurred since the great popular uprising against the use of injunction by the courts against the working people in 1893 under the Cleveland administration. There, too, the abuse of the court process occurred in and about Chicago and was directed also against the striking railroad men.

The English courts once attempted to do what the American courts are doing. They tried to nullify an act of Parliament as unconstitutional just as our American courts are constantly nullifying acts of Congress and acts of the Legislature. The Lord Chief Justice promptly lost his head as a result of this attempt to set himself above the British Parliament. The English people were not so drastic with the judges who undertook to supplant Parliament by making laws for the working people on a strike through the abuse of the power of injunction. But Parliament did, however, pass a drastic law forbidding the courts from any such further attempts to usurp the power of the Legislature, and the English courts have never dared to try it since.

We attempted to do the same thing in the Clayton act, but the courts are much bolder than the English courts and our labor leaders are much more stupid, or at least they prefer to be more ineffective rather than to call in to their assistance the ablest men. So the Clayton act was loosely drawn and the courts boldly took advantage of its looseness and promptly made it a nullity so far as the protection of labor against the power of injunction is concerned.

But we are still a democratic republic, though we often do not act like it. The forms of a democratic republic exist, awaiting the energy and intelligence on the part of a great majority to make it really democratic.

Minimum Auto Speed

We recently called the attention of Mr. Goodwin, Motor Vehicle Registrar, to the menace of the slow-moving car on the road and to the slowness with which the trucks move out to make way for an oncoming car.

We are gratified to learn that Mr. Goodwin has, by personal investigation, confirmed our opinion that the too slow-moving car was as much of a nuisance and a menace as the too fast car. A puttering car will hold up other cars until there is a funeral procession on the road sometimes twenty-five cars deep. The unenterprising drivers will fall in behind the funeral march and those who want to make ordinary time on the road find it exceedingly difficult to pass this long string of cars. They are so close together that it is impossible to pass around into a space ahead of the car immediately ahead, and it is dangerous to attempt to pass the whole line at high speed because you never can tell when one may not attempt to jump out of line; and, with our crooked roads, you can never tell when a car coming from the opposite direction may not choke up your outlet and bottle you in.

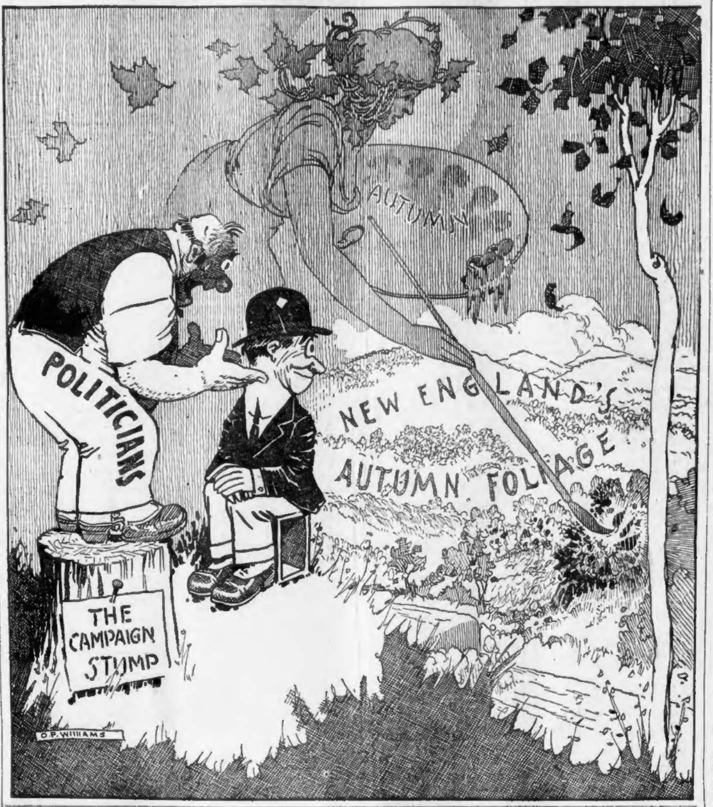
There ought to be a minimum speed as well as a maximum. On a good country road no car ought to be allowed to go less than twenty miles an hour.

Since Mr. Goodwin has confirmed our complaint we may expect soon to see some new regulations which will eradicate that nuisance and danger.

Now as to the trucks. They ought to be better lighted, and if the character of the road and the weight of the truck make it difficult for them to stay on the right side, then they ought to be absolutely required to carry mirrors which will enable them to see an oncoming car, because they make so much noise themselves that the horn of the oncoming car is in many cases not at all audible to the truck driver.

Then it might be a good thing, after they have been properly equipped, to request other motorists to report a truck driver who does not keep his eyes on his reflector and makes himself a nuisance thereby. It would be perfectly easy for another motorist to drop a line to Mr. Goodwin calling his attention to the time and place and the number of the truck which failed promptly to get over when another car approached. The registrar could use his own judgment as to the way of treating these complaints. He could file them and when two or th[illegible] of them accumulated against the same truck he could i[illegible]gate or he could investigate in respect to the first comp[illegible]

The Counter Attraction



Rabbi Wins A Pig

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

And that is precisely what happened at a Rotary Club picnic in Oklahoma the other day.

The freakish possibilities of life's lottery were humorously illustrated when, of all the several hundred Rotarians who drew for a 150-pound pig, offered as a gift at that picnic, the porker fell to the lot of a rabbi.

Rabbi Joseph Blatt of Temple B'nai Israel, Oklahoma City, held the winning number.

Having no particular use for a pig, the rabbi offered the prize to Fr. A. F. Monnot, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help.

It was Friday!

But the pig was in no hurry to be eaten, for he was alive and would keep for another day.

So Fr. Monnot took the squealer.

This incident really happened, its complete and unquestionable authenticity being vouched for by the fact of its appearance as a news dispatch in the metropolitan daily which offers only "news that's fit to print."

Similar stories, which are known to be apocryphal, are swapped wherever accounts of good-natured banter between rabbi and priest are acceptable.

Such stories are then given a momentary local habitation through retelling with circumstantial detail about that which never happened.

The increasingly closer contract fostered by American life among those who used to take a stupid pride in living suspiciously apart is a means of mutual revelation that not only Judy O'Grady and the colonel's lady, but Jew and Gentile are humans under the skin.

Suppose, now, that the Oklahoma rabbi had solemnly refrained from taking part in the picnic drawing for the pig.

And suppose the genial Father Monnot had stiffly refused to accept the porker from Hebraic hands.

Well, then, they—and you and I—would have missed this particular illustration of what modern democracy is continuously teaching."

Namely, that under and over all subdivisions—religious, economic, social—we are all members of the United States of Man.

Where Were the Irish?

Editor Boston American:

I noticed the other day a letter in your paper asking if there were so many Irish in America both before and during the American Revolution, why such a lack of Irish names in the history of our country? Let me state a few facts in this letter, were it possible I would gladly write for the Boston American enough historical data to fill a page.

Berwick, Maine, was named after the Duke of Berwick, leader of Irish Revolution of 1690-1691. Belfast, Maine, was named for the Irish city of Belfast. Auburn, Maine, for the Irish town of Auburn. Limerick, Maine, for the Irish city of Limerick. Bangor, Maine, for the Irish University of Bangor. Antrim, Londondery, and Sullivan county, New Hampshire, all Irish. Concord, Massachusetts, and the city of Worcester, the latter colonized by Fitzgerald with fifty Irish families in 1718. Baltimore, Maryland, named for the Irish port of Baltimore, settled by Cecil Calvert, an Irish Catholic, who first granted in America freedom of religious worship while the Puritans in Massachusetts were banishing Roger Williams, founder of the Baptist Church to perish of cold and starvation.

Fort McHenry, defending Baltimore from the destruction that the British visited on Washington, which they burned to the ground, which fate they had planned for Baltimore and Philadelphia, was named for the Irish Doctor McHenry, practically first Secretary of War on the staff of George Washington.

In the War of the American Revolution and the War of 1812, were it not for the Irish contingent, the American Republic would have been destroyed.

Stuart, grandfather of Charles Stuart Parnell, took two British frigates off the New England coast, the other Stuart at Bunker Hill led the Irish boys behind the rail fence. Barrett and Parker commanded the Minute Men of Lexington. Barrett was Irish, Parker's mother was born on the banks of the River Shannon in Ireland.

General Sullivan, son of Owen Sullivan of Limerick, Maine, commanded at White Plains, Anthony Wayne, member of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of Philadelphia, took Stoney Point. General Moylan was on the staff of Washington. McComb, son of an Irish father and a French mother, beat Sir George Provost. General Richard Montgomery, fresh from Ireland, led the assault upon Quebec. Oliver Hazard Perry, mother from Drogheda, Ireland, won the battle of Lake Erie. General Andrew Jackson was born in North Carolina, brothers Hugh and Robert born in Ireland, won the battle of New Orleans.

McDonough won the Battle of Plattsburg.

Doctor Patrick Rogers, member of the United Irishmen, fleeing from the British Government, that hung the grand uncle of ex-President McKinley, arrived in Philadelphia in 1802, he there married the Irish girl, Hanna Blythe, his son William Barton Rogers founded the great University of Technology.

Fulton, son of Kilkenny Irishman, invented the steamboat. Paddy Carr died in the Boston Massacre. The Boston Patriots met in Duggan's Tavern and dumped the tea into Boston Harbor from Griffin's Wharf.

The first naval victory of the Revolution designated by the novelist, Fenimore Cooper, as the Lexington of the Seas, was won by O'Brien at Machias, Maine. The first land engagement of the Revolution was fought by Sullivan at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. The first victory was the battle of Moore's Creek, North Carolina. One thousand British loyalists surrendered to Colonel Moore, grandson of the Irishman, Roger Moore. Patrick Henry pleaded for liberty in the Virginia House of Burgesses, while Sir Edmund Burke pleaded the cause of the colonies in the British House of Parliament.

The English settlers (and there were mighty few) were mostly loyalists fighting against Washington for a British King. The Irish fought for the American Republic, without them there would be no Republic here.

Stop Knocking

Editor Boston American:

When are the people of different religions going to stop knocking one another?

I sincerely believe that it is only the ignorant Gentile that finds fault with the Hebrew's manners and his riches. If these ignorant Gentiles sat down just for one day and read the Gospel of Christ, they would find in order to follow his foot-steps they must love all men no matter their creed.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

YOU will have many diverse and diverting interests if today is your birhday, and there is no prophesying what might be your life's work. But one thing is certain, whatever you do you will do because you love it and not because it is necessary, for you are a person to whom enthusiasm is as essential as food.

Today is one of uncertain outlook for all business and of positively dangerous portent to personal relationships. Avoid quarrels at any cost to your own sensibilities.

HOW MUCH LOSS DO YOU CHARGE TO GROUCHINESS?

Foremen and superintendents get it, the men get it, and the result is that good work is not done.

Real spirit, real ambition, real interest are necessary to an industry.

From the least to the head, and back again, there must be united spirit, ambition and interest.

For this reason it is imperative for the head of any establishment to keep himself in hand and preserve an even good nature, a reasonable, approachable nature which is just to himself and his business.

But the grouchy boss is the biggest loser in his factory.

He loses in quality or production, perhaps both.

It is not wanted or expected that the boss be a jovial, prankish man.

He could not be a good boss if he were such a man. But the boss should be wholly rational and in control of emotions and his conduct so that they shall not become the master instead of his better and reasonable self.

SEEN AND HEARD

DR. SAMUEL F. WADSWORTH, Back Bay veterinary, who conducts a silver fox ranch at Sherborn, has just returned from a survey of the breeding industry on Prince Edward Island. While at Charlottetown he witnessed the following colloquy between the magistrate and a jovial youth arraigned for drunkenness: Judge—You are fined $60. Jovial Youth—Har! Har! That's easy. I got that in my pants pocket. Judge—And sixty days. Got that in your pants pocket?

"What will we name it?" is a leading question with members of the Squantum and Wollaston yacht clubs, since it has been proposed that the two clubs unite and erect a new and more modern clubhouse. The Squantum contingent wishes their name retained, arguing that it is the older and that the Wollaston club is but an offshoot, while the Wollaston crew declares that the club is to be situated on Wollaston Beach, and consequently should be named the Wollaston Club.

Three hundred trunks are swung over the edge of baggage cars to the platform of the Wellesley station daily, according to BAGGAGE MASTER LANE, whose muscles always develop at this season of the year. These trunks bear different names, as Mary, Elizabeth, Matilda, Jennie, Margaret, etc., and belong to the students arriving for Dana Hall and freshmen for Wellesley College.

While other New Hampshire towns and cities have been gaining reputations as get-married-quick centres, Dublin, largely populated by the Boston Summer colony, has been working into the limelight with its society weddings at fashionable Emmanuel Church, REV. SAMUEL McCOMB officiating. COLONEL THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON, Boston's warrior-poet, has been generally credited with being the founder of Dublin as an exclusive vacation resort.

The high cost of football is sure to raise havoc with the future Brickleys and Caseys. Everything connected with the game seems to have taken a sudden jump which may put the gridiron game out of the reach of the average school kid.

Boston's streets were probably never in such poor condition as at present. Nearly every main street or thoroughfare leading in or out of the city is being torn up and traffic is greatly delayed as a result.

Before he was appointed as a justice of the Superior Court by GOVERNOR COX, HON. JOSEPH WALSH was a member of Congress from New Bedford. While in Washington he frequently relieved SPEAKER GILLETT as the presiding officer. Judge Walsh, who is sitting in the divorce court at East Cambridge, listened attentively to the pleas of opposing counsel the other day. He caused a laugh when he said: "The chair would suggest," and then corrected himself and said, "rather, the court would suggest."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CHURCH STEEPLES

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Can you explain the action of a plumb-bob hung from the top of a church steeple? At 9 o'clock in the morning a mark was placed at point on the roof which indicated plumb point. At 3 o'clock the point of the bob had moved three inches. I am a carpenter and would appreciate an article in explanation of this happening. Personally I did not believe this until the fact was corroborated by a skilled carpenter. —A. J. W., Peekskill, N. Y."

THE motion of the steeple is due to expansion under the heat of the sun, causing one side to be longer than the other, and thus producing an inclination away from the expanded side. Different substances have different ratios, or "coefficients," of linear expansion, but you do not tell what the steeple in question is made of.

The coefficient of iron is about one 166,000th per degree Fahrenheit; of wood about one 500,000th, of masonry about one 333,000th. Between 9 a. m. and 3 p. m., the direction of inclination, following the sun, would swing around from say east to west.

Your measurement, therefore, represents double the radius of the semi-circular curve described by the plumb-bob in the course of six hours. The angle of deflection of the axis of the steeple would, then, correspond to a horizontal displacement of an inch and a half, and assuming that the height of the point of suspension was 100 feet above the roof, the angle would be almost four and three-tenths minutes or far too small a departure from verticality to be noticed except by careful measurement.

All lofty structures exhibit a similar deflection due to expansion of the most heated side. I have not at hand, in the place where I am writing, the statistics of the measurements that have been made with reference to this phenomenon as it affects constructions like the Washington Monument, the Bunker Hill Monument, the Woolworth Building, the masonry towers of the Brooklyn Bridge, etc., but you can find some of them in descriptions of these structures.

The property of expansion with increase of temperature has to be taken into account in the construction of long steel or iron bridges and its effects are allowed for by sliding joints, which take up the linear expansion and thus prevent buckling.

Of course a tall structure, like a church tower, or a "skyscraper," is also subject to deflection under the pressure of high winds. In this case the motion, unlike that due to unequal heating, is vibratory. The vibration arises from both the elasticity of the material and the variability of the wind, which is always more or less gusty, and not the less so when it is very violent.

Toupees, Besides Being a Head Covering, Make Nice Rugs for Your Fireplace

Toupees are becoming more common all the time and you don't see so many bald men now that the wigmakers are manufacturing inexpensive one-man tops.

Wigs are better than your own hair when you get used to them. It's a great convenience to be able to hand it to the bell boy in the hotel and let him take it downstairs and comb it for you.

If you live at home you can part it before you go to bed at night and hang it in the hall next to your hat.

But most men are sensitive about their toupees. One guy bought some extra hair the color of his wig and sprinkled it on his coat so that his friends would think it was falling out.

This same guy was mortified to death once when he went down to the docks to see his girl off. The boat started to leave and he thought he was tipping his hat but he was waving his hair to her.

Of course there are several ways of making these toupees stay on your head. Most men use glue, but some of them have found that thumb tacks are better.

One firm is manufacturing thumb tacks covered with hair so that they won't show. Of course these tacks hurt you while you're wearing the wig, but it feels wonderful when you take it off.

A lot of men have trouble getting the part in the right place. One guy has opened a school and makes it a business of training toupees.

He also keeps open in the evening and if you can't spare your hair in the day time you can send it to night school.

They make these wigs square, round and oblong so that nobody will have trouble getting one to fit his head.

Some of these toupees cost as much as seventy-five dollars, and others cost three bucks.

A man can spend whatever he figures his head is worth, but the average wig is so cheap nowadays that no man has to keep his hat on any more when he eats in a restaurant.

Besides being a covering for your head they also make nice rugs in front of the fireplace.

Of course when they wear out you have to buy a new one, but one guy was so dumb he used three bottles of hair tonic on his toupee before he realized what he was doing.

If your whole head is bald and you don't want to spend any money for a wig you can buy a cardboard pattern and stencil one of them on with some paint and then instead of getting a hair cut all you need is a rag and some gasoline.

A man's strength lies in his hair, so if you're bald buy a wig and then you won't have to put your glasses on every time you think your going to get into a fight.

200,000 IN PERIL IN SMYRNA

Fear All May Die, Says Appeal for Aid From the United Consuls

Mytilene, Off Asia Minor Coast, Sept. 19.—The British, French and Italian Consuls have telegraphed the allied commissioners in Constantinople the following:

"About 200,000 Christians are still lying on the seashore at Smyrna awaiting help.

"The Turkish proclamation for war prisoners from seventeen to forty-five means deliberately exposing the Christians to death from hunger and massacre, as all identification papers have been burned.

"Unless pressure is immediately applied nobody will survive.

"Please act urgently before it is too late."

A Constantinople dispatch Tuesday said permission to send vessels to Smyrna to take off the Christian refugees had been granted by Mustapha Kemal Pasha to the allied powers, the United States and Greece, but that males between the ages of 15 and 45 were excepted. And it was presumed the Nationalists intended to use them for military purposes.

Americans Taken Aboard Destroyer

Washington, Sept. 20.—All American citizens known to be i nor about Smyrna, except Consul Barnes and two women named Blackler, have been taken aboard American destroyers in the harbor, according to a message from the destroyer Edsall dated September 17 and received at the State Department today through Rear Tdmrial Bristol at Constantinople.

The despatch added, however, that additional Americans were "coming in every day," four not previously reported having appeared on the day the message was sent.

The mesage from the destroyer said the fire was still burning in Smyrna on the 17th, but that it was not considered dangerous. Disorders were still prevalent.

GIVE APPROVAL TO MANDATES OVER NAURU

Geneva, Sept. 20 (By the Associated Press).—The assembly of the League of Nations today gave general approval to the manner in which the mandates for former German colonies have been exercised.

The mandate committee, in its report, accepted as satisfactory the replies of the mandatories regarding the phosphate monopoly in the island of Nauru, the use of Chinese labor there, and the measures taken by the South African government to investigate the punitive expedition against the Hottentots, regarding the methods of which criticism has been voiced.

The Persian proposition that the league send a commission to investigate the atrocities in Asia Minor and undertake the protection of the minorities in Thrace was referred to the political committee.

The Greek delegation objected to the consideration of the proposition on the ground that it was brought before the assembly by a member (Persia) on behalf of a non-member (Turkey), which the delegation contended established a dangerous precedent.

The Greeks pointed out that an investigation of the atrocities in Asia Minor, already arranged by the powers, was prevented only by the action of the Angora government.

CAT CALLS, HISSES, FOR 'LOVE BABY'S' FATHER

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 20.—Cat calls and hisses greeted the entrance of Harry Poulin in court today as the hearing of the Tiernan-Poulin paternity case was resumed.

Pandemonium broke loose as the man accused of being the father of the November "love baby" of Mrs. Augusta Tiernan, wife of Professor John P. Tiernan of Notre Dame University, took his seat. Men stamped their feet and jeered. Women gave vent to pent-up emotions by vituperative outbursts.

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 20.—Here is a man whose wife has just branded her child with the invisible bar sinister of illegitimacy.

Here is a father who for months has carried the secret burden of the unfaithfulness of the woman who swore to "hold to him alone."

Here is a man who, after weary weeks of heart-sickening indecision, went through with his plan to make the wrecker of his home pay on the rack of public opinion, but who by this decision put his wife on the same rack.

COURTROOM IN BUZZ.

Here is a man who is supposed to be a rather cold-blooded, calm, pedagogical sort of person, much more interested in the technical niceties of the laws he teaches than in the little human everyday commonplaces of life.

And yet, after Professor and Mrs. Tiernan had seated themselves in the council chamber courtroom of Judge Chester Ducomb, where Harry Poulin, dashing haberdasher, is being tried on the charge of being the father of Mrs. Tiernan's last baby, a messenger boy brought in a bouquet of roses.

The buzz of speculation that came immediately from the throng of packed curious ones betokened intense interest. Where did they come from? Was it Harry Poulin? Was it some unknown or anonymous sympathizer?

A sympathizer, yes, but not anonymous or unknown. It was Prof. Tiernan who sent the flowers.

In cruel contrast it was to the failure on the part of the professed lover months before to send roses to her before the baby was born.

STUDENTS LOSE JOBS AT TABLES

Needing the Money to Complete Education, They Protest in Vain to Authorities

Approximately forty students, the majority of them of Jewish extraction, have found their means of education closed to them through the action of the new graduate manager of the Harvard Union.

These students have for the past years waited on table, their pay being enough for their expenses for the collegiate year. It is now proposed that colored help be employed in place of these youths in the dining hall.

Two of the students have stated that they will not return to Harvard as a result of this action. The plans for those who have depended on this means of earning money have been left in a predicament, for some of them are already in their final year at Harvard and may be forced to abandon the struggle for a degree at the conclusion of the present year.

COLORED HELP NOW.

Three years ago Foxcroft Hall, one of the largest dining halls at Harvard, excluded student help, and Memorial Hall has been in the hands of colored help for many years.

Several students complained to the governing board of the union, but met with no sympathy. They were told that the Harvard Union is not a charitable institution.

Among the students to protest were James A. Pulsford of South Orange, N. J., and Charles F. Ramseyer of Jamaica Plain. Pulsford wad was slated to act as head waiter this year, while Ramseyer was employed in that capacity in 1921-1922. Others who are working for the reinstatement of the student waitersystem at Harvard are Frank Brennan, a member of the Crimson varsity football squad, who comes from Lexington, Mass., and Paul E. Lord of Oxford, Mass.

One of the first acts of the new superintendents was to discharge Thomas Hynes of No. 280 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, who has served as janitor for sixteen years. "Tom," as he is familiarly known to Harvard graduates and students, was one of the most popular characters about Harvard, and his work as janitor is said to have been absolutely satisfactory to all

'WOMAN IN BLACK' AT MURDER TRIAL

DR. BRYSON CASE IS OPENED

Mystery Starts Surgeon's Fight on the Charge of Slaying Woman

By LUTHER A. HUSTON.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Courthouse, Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 20.—Mystery and pathos, age old elements of the drama, were sharply emphasized today as the trial of Dr. Herbert J. Bryson entered the testimony taking stage.

The jury, which will decide the fate of the former Washington surgeon who is on trial for the slaying of Mrs. Irene Haines, with whom he lived illictly for several months before death, was complete when court convened today.

The mystery is provided by a beautiful woman in black who throughout two days of the trial has succeeded in hiding carefully behind a veil of anonymity.

The pathos also is provided by women—two of them—one seeking to save an erring and broken son from execution and the other striving to avenge the slaying of her daughter.

THE "WOMAN IN BLACK."

Drawn by the appeal of the human emotions that are uppermost in this tragedy of murder and clandestine romance, the county folk again crowded Judge Bailey's courtroom.

"Who is the woman in black?" is the question that has gripped all of Huntingdon. Is she a "surprise witness" for the defense whose testimony is so vital that it cannot be revealed, or is she a figure from the undisclosed past of Dr. Bryson, who has come to aid him in his darkest hour?"

Whatever her purpose in the court, the woman has succeeded admirably in hiding her identity. Upon the register of a local hotel her name appears as "Miss McCreary of Ohio." The shrug of a slim, sombreclad shoulder was the only answer she vouchsafed as she turned away from the questions of newspapermen.

GRIEF-STRICKEN MTHER.

Beside Bryson sits his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Bryson, whose seamy face and grief-dimmed eyes gave mute testimony of deep heart yearnings that the plight of her son has brought to her.

A few feet away at the prosecution table, Mrs. Helen Kirby, whose daughter fled from her husband in Washington to accompany Bryson to the mountain hamlet where they lived together in a Methodist parsonage, takes an active part in the conduct of the State's case.

Bryson throughout the first day of the trial spoke not a single word. He sat slumped down in his chair, gazing at the floor, and seldom moving as much as by the turn of his head.

District Attorney Fetterhoef announced that he expected to close his case before court adjourned today. Defense probably will require two days for the presentation of its evidence. Indications were that the case would go to the jury late Friday or early Saturday.

HISS FATHER OF LOVE BABY

testimony of the husband, whether the Tiernans lived together as husband and wife during February and March of 1921—the months during which Mrs. Tiernan testified she kept her clandestine tryst with Paulin.

If the court permits, the professor will confirm his wife's statement that they did not live in the married relation during those months in an effort to prove that the eleven months-old babe—"Exhibit A" in the case, is not his child. Mrs. Tiernan has already explained how she tricked her husband into believing that the baby was his own.

Through blinding tears she told a story of carefully planned deceit. She went to him on April 2, she said, after she knew that she was to become a mother and then on April 10, she told him of her condition.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 20.—If action taken by the House of Bishops eventually is validated, the Protestant Episcopal Church will have eleven, instead of ten, commandments in its prayer book.

The bishops voted in general convention here to add a "new commandment" embracing Christ's admonition to "love one another." It was said that this will be printed with the Ten Commandments. The text adopted is this

"Again he said 'A new commandment I give you, that ye love me as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.'"

She said that the wedding had been delayed, but that it would take place this week. She is a sister of Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation.

It was in the days when the Gary family lived on a farm near Wheaton, Ill., now a suburb of Chicago, that Mrs. Ellis and Fox attended Wheaton College.

Schooldays over, they became separated and each married another. Mrs. Ellis has been a widow thirteen years. Mr. Fox lost his wife several years ago and the college romance was revived recently when he stopped here on a trip East.

DAVIS WARNS OF 'FLAPPER' PERIL

Columbus, O., Sept. 20.—Flighty feibles and the flippancy of the "flapper," Secretary of Labor Davis declared today in addressing the American Insurance Union, are disturbing evils in the social fabric of the nation which must be overcome.

The "iniquities of our younger set, the flippancy of the cigarette smoking, cocktail drinking flapper is all about us," he added, explaining, however, that he had "supreme faith in the youth of the land, and in the 'mothers of America.'"

DEFECTIVES NEGLECTED.

"We hear," Mr. Davis said, "much of evil tendencies among our girls and boys of erotic conversations and literature in our schools and home, of the exuberance of youth turned to outbursts of sophisticated sentimentality." Such conditions, he added, were disturbing.

The things, however, which had prompted him to concentrate his life and work to the services to childhood, he declared, were these:

"Two hundred and fifty thousand American babies snatched by death from their mothers' breasts every year before they have had time scarce to open their unseeing eyes upon the world about them.

"Half a million children, so-called defectives and delinquents, growing up almost totally neglected.

FALSE EDUCATION.

"A million and a half American boys and girls, bent beneath the burden of premature toil in mine and mill and factory before they have sensed the duties and privileges of humanity.

"Thirty million American children of school age, who even if they can win the opportunity for education, face in our schools a false learning, an education that will not fit more than one in ten of them for the places they must occupy in life."

HEIRESS SPENDS HONEYMOON IN BERKSHIRES

New York, Sept. 20.—Robert G. Elbert, to whom Miss Marion C. Bourne, daughter of the late Commodore Frederick G. Bourne, was married in Baltimore recently, is secretary and general manager of the 300 Park Avenue Company, in which Sherry's Restaurant is located. The announcement of the wedding came with as much of a surprise to the business associates of Mr. Elbert as it did to the members of the bride's family and her large circle of friends in society.

The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Elbert, who with her shared in the great estate left by Commodore Bourne, for many years president of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, declined to reveal the wedding date or other details of the romance between the heiress and the apartment hotel manager.

It was learned, however, that Mr. Elbert and his bride have gone on a motor trip through the Berkshires and will extend their tour for another two weeks through New England.

Upon their return they will go to Indian Neck Hall, their country home at Oakdale, L. I., which Commodore Bourne built at a cost of $500,000. The house is being prepared for their arrival at the end of this month.

Mr. Elbert, who, one of his associates said, is thirty-eight, started his hotel business career, is said, as a clerk in the Hotel McAlpin. He soon had a position of greater responsibility and about a year ago was made secretary and general manager of the Park avenue apartment hotel. His friends speak highly of him. His secretary said she was taken completely by surprise when she read of his marriage. He left his office for a month's vacation.

Mr. Elbert is a son of the late Judge C. Elbert of Virginia. He was in the army aviation service.

NEW WIFE OF EX-KAISER TO BE 'EMPRESS'

Potsdam, Sept. 20.—According to the Hohenzollern law, Princess Hermine, who is to marry former Emperor William, will be regarded as his Empress and treated as such in what remains of his former court. She is expected to be popular, as she possesses a lively temperament, and shows keen interest in arts and sports.

The second marriage of William is not without precedent in the Hohenzollern line. Frederick William III married the beautiful young Countess Herrach, "the Bohemian jewel in the Prussian crown," twelve years after the death of Queen Louise, at the age of fifty-two. This second marriage was a morganatic one.

PRINCESS A WIDOW OF 30.

Princess Hermine is a widow, 30 years old, with five children, the eldest being twelve years old. Her husband, Prince Johann, died of illness contracted in Rumania during the war.

The former Kaiser came to know the Princess during the past Summer, when she spent a week visiting women who formerly headed court circles.

The only respect in which the former Kaiser's sons demurred against the marriage is said to have been founded on the love for their mother, the late Empress Augusta Victoria. Former Crown Prince Frederick William is reported to have been the most sympathetic with regard to the marriage, since his close connections with his father enabled him to appreciate more fully his need for a companion following the death of his wife.

ABANDONS HOPE OF THRONE.

Some sections of the newspapers view the step as evidence that William has abandoned all hope of ever returning to the throne.

Emphasis is laid by the newspapers on the loneliness which the former Emperor has been enduring, yet they express the opinion that the proposed marriage will not be received everywhere with rejoicing on account of the wide popularity of and the love showered upon the former Kaiserin by the people.
